RADIUM TO END THE WHITE PLAGUE

Friend of King Edward Gives Donation to Start Royal Institute

REMARKABLE CURES ACHIEVED

Experimental and Curative Work Contemplated—Sir Frederick Treves at the Head—Effort to Be Made to Get Radium from German Pitchblende.

London.—Sir Frederick Treves, sergeant-surgeon to the King and consulting surgeon of the London Hospital, cited in lecturing at that hospital some interesting instances of radium cures he had witnessed, including tuberculosis, rodent ulcers and spindle-sarcoma.

He said it was almost uncanny to see the rapid manner in which radium sometimes accomplished healing. After the first application, say on Monday, nothing happens until about Friday, when the skin suddenly becomes red and irritable. Then a sort of crust forms, which comes away in two or three weeks.

About a month later there is a second application of radium after which in many cases the patient does not need to see a physician again.

Sir Frederick pointed out that one of the greatest uses of radium in the future might result from its intense radioactive emanations. He described how a penny enclosed in a jar with an unsealed vial of radium became itself radioactive; if the penny were removed and washed with nitric acid its radioactivity was transferred to the latter while the penny was no longer radioactive.

As an instance of possible future usefulness the lecturer told how a solution of such radioactive deposit was injected into a mouse suffering from an artificially induced abdominal cancer. The result was that the growth entirely disappeared. It would be a mistake to rely too much on this or similar cases but they were very suggestive. It was conceivable that lung diseases might some day be found curable by inhaling a radioactive emanation or vapor.

A charter will shortly be granted establishing the Royal British Radium Institute. The institute will carry on research work and will also have a medical department eventually for the treatment of cases to which experiment has shown the radium cure is applicable.

The foundation of the institute in which King Edward has taken the greatest personal interest has been made possible by a handsome donation from Ernest Cassel who is an intimate friend of the King. Its work will probably be carried on with the help of the Imperial Cancer Research Fund.

The new institute's council will include Sir Frederick Treves, M.D., sergeant-physician to the King; Sir William Ramsay, M. D., and Joseph John Thomson, professor of physics at the Royal Institution.

The scarcity of radium and the extreme difficulty of obtaining it since Austria forbid its exportation have led to the formation of a private syndicate here for the purpose of exploiting the pitchblende deposits in the Trewith copper mine in Cornwall. Hopes are entertained of producing radium therefrom as a commercial commodity, enabling scientists and physicians to become independent of foreign supplies.

Before the discovery of radium the pitchblende from the Trewith mine was thrown away after the copper and uranium had been extracted. The residues are being collected now and radium seeking will begin forthwith. The mine belongs to a company in which some South African mining concerns are interested, and $300,000 capital has already been found for the new enterprise, for which public subscriptions will not be asked.

Physicians here wishing to experiment with radium are mainly dependent on tubes of the material which they hire from three or four wholesale druggists at a fixed tariff. It is estimated that the efficacy of the radium in these tubes will endure for at least 30,000 years.

Parrot, at Meal Time, Rings Bell.

Alton, Ill.—A parrot with the instincts of a society person is owned by Abraham Riker. The bird is a great stickler for formality and is unhappy when the little niceties of life are overlooked. The parrot always rings a little silver bell to call itself to dinner when food is served to it. If food isn't served on time then the parrot rings the bell to call the food to it.

Riker is an upholsterer and lives at No. 609 East Eighth street. When not upholstering he spends a great deal of time cultivating the fine Alton-esque qualities of his remarkable bird.

Polly always takes coffee—not ordinary coffee, but café noir—for breakfast. In the evening it was tea. Its food consists of crackers, apples and cake.

The parrot observed very knowingly that the Riker family always responded to the dinner bell by assembling at the table. It was given a small bell and permitted to ring it. Then food was given it. Since then Polly will not eat without first ringing the bell.

Dr. Anker Gluck Promises an Offspring That Will Talk at Birth—Recipe for Perfection.

Chicago.—Dr. Anker Gluck, inventor of the "Simple Life and Equality System" and author of "Glam Habbo; or, The New Immortality. Another Existence and a Future State," announces that he would disband his Chicago "colony." He is to join "Berowne himself," not in reality but in spirit.

Gluck's "Sanitarium" is at No. 1111 Milwaukee avenue. Although the leader says there are sixty members in his colony in Chicago, neighbors say they have not been appearing at the headquarters lately. The head of the cult asserts that both he and his wife are now perfect. "In fifteen months," he adds, "a child will be produced that will be able to talk at birth and that will never die. That child will be myself reborn."

The "doctor" said he intended selling all his possessions in Chicago and removing to some quiet spot where there would be no danger that either he or his wife would depart from the principles of "perfect conduct."

It is hinted that Gluck has become discouraged because other members of his band did not become "perfect." The temptations of the world, it is asserted, proved too strong for the majority of those who took up the "simple life and equality system," and they dropped the teachings of Gluck.

Among the things said to be responsible for the backsliding are women, cards, drink and theatres. Gluck's recipe for perfection is: Vegetarianism, sackcloth garments, abstinence from newspaper, isolation from the world and prohibition of sleeping.

EVANS HAS A FAVORITE.

In Next Russian-Japanese War, but Admiral Won't say which.

Pittsburg.—Admiral Robley D. Evans, has exploded a story which close friends of Andrew Carnegie have been exploiting for years, that Carnegie sanctioned his own money and comfort to establish an armor plate mill at Homestead for the Government. Said Admiral Evans:

"I was the first man to suggest to Andrew Carnegie that he build an armor plate mill. It was when I was inspector of steel at the Homestead mills that I said to Mr. Carnegie that I thought he should build such a mill. I pointed out to him that it was going to be a great industry and that he should get in on the ground floor in America. He took to the idea at once and sent for Julian Kennedy, the engineer, laid the plans before him and asked how much it would cost. 'About $[illegible],' replied Kennedy. 'We should build it,' replied Carnegie, and there's how the first armor plate mill was built at Homestead."

Asked his opinion about the possibility of another war between Russia and Japan he said:

"There will be a war there some time. It's bound to come. Russia is too big and powerful to sit down calmly and permit Japan to snap her up without retaliation. But it won't come until Russia is ready for it, and then there will be a fight worth seeing."

"Who do you think will win?"

"I wouldn't like to say, but I know who I hope will win, but I'm not saying," he said, laughing.

BABBLERS EXCORIATE SATAN.

Women Have Been Testing Hell Since the Garden of Eden.

South Norwalk, Conn.—Women commenced to babble in the garden of Eden and she has babbled down through the ages from that day to this," said the Rev. Hugh E. Gaffney in the Baptist church here when preaching to a club of young women called "The Silent Seven."

"Nothing will send the devil back to the Satanic regions, to die and be fire alone, . . . the devil . . . but pulling his whiskers . . . [illegible]

A few months ago the [illegible] had occasion to remove a number of young ladies from the quality [illegible] during during service. They banded themselves together in a club called "The Silent Seven." They sewed for charity, and their sessions were social affairs with tea for refreshments, the money going to charity.

The Doctor commended them on their work this evening, and expressed a wish that they would form the church into a "Silent Four Hundred."

SAW "UNCLE TOM'S CABIN" IN VISION.

Mrs. Stowe's Son Says She Received Idea for Story in Church.

Hartford, Conn.—The Rev. Charles M. Stowe, in a speech here before a church club, said his mother, Harriet Beecher Stowe, received the idea of "Uncle Tom's Cabin" in a vision which she had in church, in which she saw clearly depicted the pathetic death of old Uncle Tom. He said his mother began the story with this scene, writing the book backward.

In a recent court case it was shown that Mrs. Stowe's sister, Mrs. Isabella Beecher Hooker, held communication with spirits concerning her will and the phases of her everyday life.

Warrant for Bunyan Brings $22.

London, England.—One of the two warrants issued in 1671 for the arrest of John Bunyan was submitted for sale by auction here and evoked a bid of only $22. The first amount offered was $5. The other warrant presumably a duplicate of the speed men offered is owned by J. P. Morgan, who is said to have paid $1,[illegible] for it.

[illegible] AIM OF ROOSEVELT

Where President Will Hunt Three South Days Not Being Selected for 10 Months

ESTATE WITH YANKEE HOUSE

Mr. Millikin, in Whose Jungles the Roosevelt Will Shoot Big Game, Has Everything in Readiness for His Distinguished Guest.

Lenox.—Wilder Hartshorn Millikin, nephew of the late Stephen Van Millikin, of Middletown, and his wife have sailed from Marseilles for India, to visit the Maharajah of Gwalior, his host at his current invitation. Morgan Bridget and Mary and six other Millikinians, all friends of the Millikins, are in the party. Their fellow-passengers were the Princess Royal and the Duke of Fife and their two daughters; Sir Henry and Lady Trubshawe and Lady Trubshawe and her mother, Lord Frederick Hamilton. The Trubshawes are great travelers and intimate friends of the Millikins.

After this visit Mr. Millikin will hunter in South Africa. He has invited President Roosevelt to join the party on his visit to the Millikins' jungles and as host he wants to be certain that everything is ready to receive Mr. Roosevelt and his son. Mr. Millikin, himself a mighty hunter, will not shoot with his guests, will not join them or even receive them.

Certainly the Roosevelts will enjoy no hunting while they remain in the estate, which is to be shown to them. It is called the Jeja Nivas because it lies between the Ji River and the Je River. The chief bungalow is the most comfortable residence imaginable, with five stories and a veranda. It was made in America at the order of Mr. Millikin.
