lane in the midst of our own London; tapers were on all sides, and waves in incense, and the low thunder of innumerable tongues praying together; men used to arms kneeling together with bowed heads and folded hands like children; ineffable voices. I know not whether boy's or angels,' floating upward to the golded monstrance, and they sang--they must have echoed the choir of God in heaven--O Salutaris Hostia, Quae coeli pandis ostium--"

"My Lord! ---He's ill! This comes of too much dreaming. Get water, Jarvis!"

"That is no swoon, your honor"

"Get water, fool! My Lord of Arundel! Help me with him, gentlemen. Yes, on the bed, and see if the physician can be found. My Lord, rouse you!"

"Ah, is that you, Nan?"

"It is I, my Lord---Sir Michael Blount."

"Blount? Hark! they are singing . nearer . "

Silence in the gray chamber, one thin ray of filtered light falling across the dim space upon the words the patient hands had carved so long since: "The more sufferings for Christ in this world the more glory with Christ in the next." The tired eyelids of their own will, have dropped One gasp and another from the wan lips, faintly moving. A cry from the kneeling warder:

"O God, my Lord is dying!"

Then the grave voice of him who had brought the last ineffectual offer of freedom had been swept aside by the angel of the open gate:

"Peace fellow! Her Majesty's merciful justice is unavailing. The Earl of Arundel is dead."

DEADLY WATER OF THE DESERT

Mistake Made by Travelers in the Arid Wastes of the Southwest.

"One of the chief dangers to travelers crossing such great and arid wastes as the far famed Death Valley in Nevada arises from ignorance as to the character of the infrequent pools of water along the route said T E Smalley a mining engineer of Denver

The tenderfoot, growing faint under a blazing sun will want to quench his intolerable thirst when he comes to a shallow hole, whose water clear as crystal seems absolutely pure He can with difficulty be restrained from drinking it by some experienced companion who knows that one draught will probably cause serious if not fatal illness This water for all its seeming purity and clearness is loaded with arsenic, and many a man has lost his life by its use

Curiously enough, the only water in the desert that is safe to drink is foul looking and inhabited by bugs and snakes When you come to a muddy pool on the surface of which insects are disporting themselves, however repulsive it may be both to the eye and palate, you may drink it with impunity, despite its looks, as a man will who is crazy with thirst produced by the burning sands and merciless sun "

Consumption and the Telephone.

The panic recently created on the subject of the assumed danger lurking in the transmitter of the telephone is not precisely new It is but the development of a fear which has caused misgiving for some years On the supposition that various germs of disease probably collect in the receiver and transmitter of the instrument at any rate in public telephone stations some medical alarmists have thrown out suggestions that antiseptics both in a dry state and in solution should be applied for the safety of the telephone user The recent dictum goes one step further, inasmuch as it is now an established fact that tubercle bacilli the casual micro organisms of consumption have been found alive and in robust condition in the instrument It is quite natural, in view of such a find, that a feeling of alarm might seize hold of the more nervous -- British Medical Journal

THE MIDDLE AGED MAN.

Why He Thinks It Is Rheumatism That Bothers Him and Not Gout.

"Can anybody tell me," said the middle aged man, "the difference between rheumatism and gout? Now, not being very well versed in medical science, knowing very little in fact about osteology or therapeutics or anatomy, materia medica or pharmacopoea, I wouldn't undertake, myself, offhand to say, but in a general way I would say that gout is an ailment that attacks the rich and rheumatism the poor, and, being not what you would call a rich man, I suppose what I've got is rheumatism

"I have read in novels and seen pictures of portly gentlemen of middle age or rather more who sat in great easy chairs and with one foot all swathed up in bandages stretched out in front of them supported on a foot rest. This is the old gentleman, living in a fine old manor house or in a splendid mansion in town, who is described in the novel as being testy and choleric—choleric, as I understand it, meaning not that he has cholera or anything of that sort but an uneven temper; and this old gentleman with foot thus done up in bandages and supported on a foot rest has gout.

"But several of my symptoms are different. I don't live in an old manor house, nor in a mansion in town; and however disposed I might be to be testy and choleric, I have to keep my temper, and I don't swath my foot in bandages and recline it on a foot rest. I have to keep more or less on the move.

"So I suppose that in the absence of the familiar gout symptoms we might safely diagnose my case as one of just plain rheumatism; but I guess my rheumatism hurts me about as much as the gout of our testy and choleric old friend hurts him."

Ancient Knowledge.

The Greek, Eratosthenes, 250 B. C. taught the doctrine of the rotundity of the earth, and the ideas of the sphere its poles, axis, the equator arctic and antarctic circles, equinoctial points and the solstices were quite generally entertained by the wise men of that time There were plenty of men in Rome, therefore who were prepared to talk about the earth as a sphere and to make globes illustrating their idea.
