UP TO THE MINUTE STYLES.

A Moderately Priced Real Lace Veil For the Winter Bride.

All the fashionable colors, including street and evening shades, are to be had in a handsome wool back satin that is a yard and a half wide and that sells for about $3.90 a yard.

Here is news for the prospective bride: Princess face veils, about the only real ones at moderate cost, are marked in a reliable shop at from $20 to $32 a veil.

The new fashion of fastening coat sleeves is by link buttons, such as are used in a man's shirt. They are not of gold or silver, but made to match the buttons used in front.

Some of the skirts now shown are here and there strapped and banded, but the acute "hobble" style, when shown at all, is offered with an air of deprecation.

Plain and embroidered collars are still holding their own in regular and low necked shapes, and it is expected that they will be worn throughout the autumn with both plain tailored and silk and wool waists and with some of the fancy high necked styles.

The coat that is finished with a big mink collar is very becoming to the younger girls.

The coat can be treated with a collar of this sort or with a notched collar, as preferred, and it can be made to cover the dress or in a shorter length. JUDIC CHOLLET

FOOTMARKS OF FASHION.

"Near" Aigrets Save Feelings of Audubonites and Are Very Decorative.

"Near" aigrets fill a long felt want in that they save the feelings of those women whose sympathies are Audubonic, while they make almost as pretty a decoration as the real things.

For girls between the ages of eight to twelve there are corduroy coats of full fox style with straps across the back and linings and interlinings of satin for $27.50. They are shown in green, tan, black and blue.

Turbans of ermine undecorated by the black tails are immensely smart. A black aigret or a handsome cabochon is generally the only trimming.

A huge mushroom shape seen recently is of white velvet with a two inch band of black velvet edging the brim. It is trimmed with a profusion of black and white "near" aigrets.

Underwear of the latest and most approved sort is quite essential to dolly's outfit. Here are all the needed garments cut after the prettiest possible manner, yet so simple and easy to make that the very tiniest little mother can provide for her child's wardrobe.

HERE AND THERE.

Something New in Turban Shapes. Odd Evening Wraps.

Brimmed turbans are seen with upright brims almost as high as the hat itself and close to it, except at the back.

Evening wraps made of bright colored fabrics are being lined either with black satin or velvet. This is reversing the usual order of things.

Applique satin is a new treatment of satin that reproduces almost exactly the high priced brocade satins. Its design is known as applique, and it comes in all light shades.

A new feature in the cut of Drecoll's skirts for tailored suits is a very broad flat plait at the center back. The effect is that of flattening the figure, giving a very straight line at the back.

The Watteau or shepherdess model is the new feature in hats. Draped turbans and Louis XV models are prominent among smaller hats.

The skirt that is made with a double box plait at the front and back is a new one greatly liked this winter. This model includes plaited side portions that provide a comfortable flare, while the seams over the hips mean the snug fit necessary to smartness.

New Quilted Jackets For Wear Under Evening Capes.

To wear under lightweight suits and under evening capes are sleeveless jackets of quilted silk, with bands of Japanese embroideries down the front. They come in black, white and many colors. Those with long sleeves are $5 each.

The season is bringing constant surprises in color schemes. One of the latest combinations is the blue and green metallic effects. There is a pretty but rather cold grayish blue called "polenord."

Coat collars still retain shawl and tailor effects, but the latest models show higher closing. Coats buttoning with the single breasted or diagonal lap are very new.

Shoulder collars are very large and round. They are frequently of embroidered batiste and hand embroidered or of malines in two different shades fastened with a metal ornament.

The empire has been too popular a style to be cast aside, and the new gowns in this effect are extremely graceful.

Garments just like those worn by little girls are the most in demand for dollies. Here is a dress that can be made either with the square or high neck. Both the dress and the rompers come within the scope of the little mothers themselves to make.

FADS AND FACTS.

Correct Costume For the Smart Woman When She Travels.

The smart woman of today leaves her home for a journey just as if she were going out for a morning's shopping, but when she gets into the train or the steamer she consigns her hat to the rack and dons just a suede leather turban, meanwhile getting into her ample coat—that is, if the train is not sufficiently warm. At the journey's end she gets into her ordinary garb again.

ly well, to say nothing of skunk. The flat muff and broad stoles and scarfs have had a long inning, and they are not so warm as the round shape.

An unusual and effective color scheme noted in a Parisian gown is cherry colored silk covered with black chiffon embroidered in dead gold.

Fashionable outer garments must be included in every doll's wardrobe. Here is a cape that is simply made, yet smart in the extreme. A smart little coat and a cap that is quite up to date are offered also.

PURE GLYCERIN.

It Is a Queer Substance Endowed With Peculiar Properties.

One of the great advantages of glycerin in its chemical employment is the act that it neither freezes nor evaporates under any ordinary temperature. No perceptible loss by evaporation has been detected at a temperature less than 200 degrees F., but if heated intensely it decomposes with a smell that few persons find themselves able to endure. It burns with a pale flame, similar to that from alcohol, if heated to about 300 degrees and then ignited. Its nonevaporative qualities make the compound of much use as a vehicle for holding pigments and colors, as in stamping and typewriter ribbons, carbon papers and the like.

If the pure glycerin be exposed for a long time to a freezing temperature it crystallizes with the appearance of sugar candy, but these crystals being once melted it is almost an impossibility to get them again into the congealed state. If a little water be added to the glycerin no crystallization will take place, though under a sufficient degree of cold the water will separate and form crystals, amid which the glycerin will remain in its natural state of fluidity. If suddenly subjected to intense cold pure glycerin will form a gummy mass which cannot be entirely hardened or crystallized. Altogether it is quite a peculiar substance.

DON'T GET TOO SEDATE.

Play Is as Good For Grown Persons as For Children.

Play is just as necessary to keep a grown man young and a middle aged man from growing old as it is to make a child grow into a man. Wordsworth's lines are as sound physiology as good poetry:

My heart leaps up when I behold
The rainbow in the sky.
So was it when my life began;
So be it when I am a man
Or let me die.

In childhood we play because we are young. In middle age we are young because we play, and if we keep it up we shall never know that we are old until we are one day suddenly dead. Yet the absurd idea has grown up, and Mrs. Grundy has adopted it with her usual fatuousness, that play is something undignified in a grown man and unbecoming in a lady. And this unfortunately is one of the rare instances where "thinking makes it so." After a man has practiced this belief in the uselessness of exercise for half a decade or so and become fat and pompous and red faced or pale and slack muscled and short winded then the contortions that he indulges in when he decides to unbend and try to play furnish considerably more entertainment to spectators than to himself.—Dr. Woods Hutchinson in Outing.

In the Shadow of Fame.

There are a number of former celebrities who are now running rooming and boarding houses in New York city. Many a singer, actress or writer who formerly held a place in the public eye has now settled down to the prosaic occupation of housing and feeding a small portion of that same public. Their houses are a magnet for young persons with the artistic temperament. One woman who once enjoyed a fair reputation as a violinist has five furnished apartments which she sublets room by room to aspirants for dramatic, operatic and literary honors. Reflected glory rather than physical comfort is the portion of most of these satellites, but the privilege of hobnobbing with yesterday's greatness compensates for material discomfort.—New York Press.

Cicero on Wit.

There are witty sayings which carry a concealed suspicion of ridicule, of which sort is that of the Sicilian who, when a friend of his made lamentation to him saying that his wife had hanged herself upon a fig tree, said: "I beseech you give me some shoots of that tree that I may plant them." Of the same sort is what Crassus said to a certain bad orator who, when he imagined that he had excited commotion at the close of a speech, asked out friend here after he had sat down whether he appeared to have raised pity in the audience. "Very great pity," replied Crassus, "for I believe that there is no one here so hard hearted but that your speech seemed pitiable to him."—Cicero's Oratory.

A Strange Likeness.

An extraordinary resemblance has recently been discovered at the London Natural History Museum between a specimen of the huge African elephant and the pygmy shrew mouse. Sir E. Ray Lankester suggested comparison of the two, and the result has been that practically every bone, muscle, blood vessel and nerve of the giant beast has been found identically reproduced in the little animal, which is scarcely two inches in length. In the museum a stuffed mouse has been placed between the fore feet of its enormous mounted prototype for the purpose of showing the curious likeness.

The Trouble.

"So she doesn't return your affection, eh? Well, I shouldn't get mad about that. What's the use of bothering about a girl?" said Watkins.

"I don't mind her not returning my affection," said Dobleigh, "but, confound it, she won't return my diamond ring, either!"—Harper's Weekly.
