Monday morning, at the residence of his parents, 72 Magne street occurred the death of Charles B. Kelly, after only a week's illness. Deceased had many warm friends who will regret to hear of his early death. He leaves, beside his widowed mother, two sisters, Anna and Maria, and one brother, Michael. The funeral took place Wednesday at 9 a. m. from the Cathedral, of which deceased had always been a member.

A fatal accident occurred at Pike's quarry, at the junction of Champlain and Summer streets on Tuesday morning. A cable used for drawing cars of stone up an inclined plane broke, precipitating the car to the bottom, striking a quarryman named Taplin, knocking him down and crushing his body. The injured man was taken to St. Mary's hospital. A part of his skull was cut completely off, exposing the brain, and his body so badly crushed that death was but a matter of time. Mr. Taplin was 62 years of age, and lived at No. 161 Cadystreet.

On Thursday morning occurred the death of Margaret B. Carroll, of 229 Adams street. Miss Carroll had been a student of the Free Academy, graduating from there in June, 1888, and had qualified and been appointed a teacher in the public schools. She began her work in September last, but retired on account of ill health. She was a young lady whose amiable and genial nature will long be missed by her relatives and friends. A mother, brother and two sisters survive her. The funeral was held this morning from the Immaculate Conception church.

A large crowd attended the Liederkranz concert at Wagner's hall on King street Tuesday evening. The program published in last week's Journal was carried out in a most acceptable to every one. Last Monday's Gale.

Last Monday's gale was the worst experienced in this section in years. The wind attained a velocity of about 75 miles an hour. Buildings were unroofed, fences blown down, heavy wagons completely upset, while walking on the street was well nigh impossible. The only fatality occurred about noon, when, without warning, the greater portion of the roof on the Kidd building in the rear of A. J. Johnson's shoe factory, on Brown's race was blown off. At the time this accident happened, G. Welter, a pattern maker employed at Gleason's machine shop, was on his way to dinner and was just underneath the flying pieces of roof and chimneys. A heavy stone with a sharp edge struck him on the head, nearly taking the top of it off, and killing him instantly. Rescues were summoned but was too late to administer the last sacraments. Mr. Welter had only worked at Gleason's a short time. He was well thought of by his fellow workmen. He was about 35 years of age, and lived with his wife at the corner of Lowell and Almira streets.

The massive cross on the steeple of the Immaculate Conception church was blown down about 10:30 a. m. Monday. It was valued at $260, and was put up about three years ago, when it was purchased to replace the one destroyed by lightning. At the point where the cross struck the ground there is usually a number of children playing, but fortunately none were around when the cross fell.
