OUR BOYS' AND GIRLS' CORNER.

Lazy Nancy and the Fairy
BY CLARA MULHOLLAND, CONCLUDED.
"Most certainly they do. You have only to wish them to do something, and they will set to and do it for you at once."
"How useful! And how pleased mother will be to see our room look nice!" "Yes, I am sure she will," replied Mistress Putinorder, with a smile. "But there is one thing about these little men—they require to be hidden. If people saw them going about they might be startled, or think you were a witch; so we must manage to hide them."
"But where? Shall we shut them up in this box? Or, I tell you, let us pop them into the cupboard there."
"No, no," and the fairy shook her head. "That would never do. Supposing you wanted to take them out to do some work? How would you hide them then?"

"I don't know. Put them into my pocket, or up my sleeves."
"No; that would not do either. They would be no use in either place."
"Then what shall we do?" asked Nancy, much perplexed.
"I will tell you," said Mistress Putinorder decidedly. "I shall hide them in your ten fingers. The stout little ones will fit nicely into your two thumbs; then you will always have them at your fingertips."
"What a capital idea! Thank you so much. Now I shall have no trouble. These tiny workmen will do everything for me."
The fairy laughed softly, and disappeared.

Trotty, did you see that funny little woman? Did you see the fairy?" cried Nancy, springing suddenly from her chair and gazing round the room.
"See a fairy? What do you mean?" said Trotty, looking up at her sister with big, round eyes. "You must have been dreaming. You were snoring quite loud."
Nonsense, child, I was doing nothing of the sort. I was talking to Mistress Putinorder, and — But there, you're only a baby, so I shan't tell you what she did. However, I shall just make a start and see what I can make these little men do for me."

And, to Trotty's astonishment, Nancy flew from one thing to another, putting everything in order with the greatest rapidity.
About an hour later their mother returned, tired and weary after her day's work.
The room looked neat and cozy as she entered; the fire was bright; the hearth cleanly brushed; the table spread for tea; the kettle sang upon the hob, and Nancy, with shining face and tidy hair, sat reading to Trotty, who looked fresh and rosy, as though but lately washed.

"Why," said Mrs. Dare, looking round her in surprise, "how nice everything is! What good fairy has paid our room a visit to-day?"
"Mistress Putinorder, mother dear," answered Nancy, briskly. "She has given me much good advice and some help, but that is a secret," and she laughed merrily.
"Mistress Putinorder is a fairy of great variety and much wisdom," replied her mother smiling. "And if my Nancy would think of her often, she would make me very happy."
"I shall never forget her—never!" cried Nancy; and, flinging her arms round her mother's neck, she kissed her lovingly.
The girl kept her promise well. From that hour the little men were but seldom idle, for Nancy made them work continually.
And in a very short time her room became quite as pretty as the one she had admired so much on the other side of the street. Catholic Home Almanac.

General Notes.
G. Latham Sholes, of Milwaukee, inventor of the typewriter, is dead at the age of 71 years. He was a pioneer journalist of Wisconsin.
Count Andrassy, the famous Hungarian statesman, is dead. He was 87 years of age.

Industry Rewarded.
Mary A. and Ellen Frances Dougherty, two Irish girls in the employ of Barbour Bros., thread manufacturers of Paterson, N. J., have deposited with that firm $16,000, every penny of which has been saved from their earnings. The girls came to this country nineteen years ago, and found work in the mill, where they have been ever since. Few American girls could have stood the hardships they endured. The heat and moisture of the spinning room made it necessary to dispense with all superfluous clothing and they worked without shoes or stockings from one year's end to another. As their living expenses were covered by $3, the rest of their earnings remained with the mill-owners, who, as an encouragement to thrift and industry, paid them 6 per cent. interest.

Catholic Society Notes.
Branch 88 received two new members and three applications for membership at its last meeting.

He is also to avoid the saloon and refuse to carry intoxicating drinks to any one.

The Catholic Young Men's Union of the Archdiocese of Baltimore held its eleventh annual convention in the rooms of the Georgetown Catholic Union in West Washington recently. The list of speakers who were announced to respond to toasts at the dinner given by the recently-organized St. James Catholic Club, in New York city, Thursday night, included Hon. Alfred Chapin, Rev. M. J. Lavelle, rector of the New York cathedral, and president of the Young Men's Catholic Union of America; Rev. John M. Kiely, founder of St. James' Young Men's Association; Hon. John C.
