Rosary Society Totals 1200 In Blessed Sacrament Parish

Claiming about 1,200 women as members, the Rosary Society of Blessed Sacrament Church, Rochester, is declared one of the largest of that of any parish in the United States, in The Parish Weekly, Dec. 30th issue.

The Weekly says the society is purely a religious one. Occasionally, social gatherings and entertainments take place. Likewise, the traditional annual Rosary Society dinner is never omitted.

AFTER DEATH a high Mass is soon offered for the soul of the deceased member. Likewise, low Masses are said each month for all the living, and for those who were members when called from life.

The monthly dues of ten cents for ten months of the year, are used for the purchase of Church linens, vestments, altar boys' cas socks and surplices, and many other purposes.

The meetings are held in the Church at four o'clock on the first Sunday of the month, at which meeting a practical talk, following the recital of the Rosary, is given by the Spiritual Adviser.

"If you do not happen to belong to the parish Rosary Society, kindly contact any member, or attend the meeting and your name and address will be taken," the Parish Weekly tells its women readers.

City Club Hears Fr. Keller Talk

Free Will "nobody goes to Hell unless he himself chooses", (2) that evil and suffering on earth "are mysteries we do not fully understand," and (3) that there are moral principles justifying war under certain conditions, there is a "moral right of defense," and that "thank God America never has been guilty of an aggressive war."

Queried about the Christopher movement, the founder said there are "no members, meetings or dues." It seeks to reach average people, he continued, "urging personal responsibility and appealing to the best in every person," and encourages them to "help change the world back to love of God and neighbor" by exerting their influence especially in the fields of education, government, communications and labor relations.

Financed by donations "from big and little people of all faiths," Father Keller said, the movement has a million and a half books in circulation, and distributes its literature free to any persons requesting it. Currently there are 30 movies and three television shows based on the Christopher idea, he said.

FATHER KELLER was introduced by Sol Linowitz, president of the City Club. Lay representatives of several Catholic organizations were among persons at the speakers table.

The priest made liberal use of specific incidents to amplify various points in his talk, especially the theme of "spreading love." He was roundly applauded following the address.
