Priest Urges 'Strong Talk' On Racism

Kansas City, Mo.—(NC)—The day for roundabout allusions from the pulpit to the evils of racism is past, a priest said here in urging more effort by Catholic clergy to combat racial discrimination.

"Racism is the greatest domestic moral evil we have, but it receives little attention from the pulpit," Msgr. Daniel Cantwell chaplain of the Catholic Intermedial Council of Chicago, told a special clergy conference on race.

He said "the day is past when priests can give a sermon on the broad outlines of charity and leave the people to draw their own conclusions."

THE MEETING was part of a program initiated by Bishop Charles H. Helmsing of Kansas City-St. Joseph to engage the full resources of the diocese in the movement for racial justice.

The Bishop told the more than 100 priests at the meeting that "it sometimes takes the shock treatment to make us realize what a horror it is for a man to be judged by the color of his skin."

He urged the priests to act with conviction in bringing to their parishioners a sense of responsibility for effecting social change.

Msgr. Cantwell advised the priests not to "miss the mood of the 1963 racial crisis," which he described as forcing leaders "to think big."

"...The important thing for us is to adequately assess the mood," he said. "It gives us the chance to get rid of the greatest social evil of our day. Despite whatever pain it costs, we must take advantage of the opportunity and join the Negro community in a positive desire for freedom for all."

"Sins of racial discrimination strike at the community of love, the family of God, yet have you ever heard such a sin confessed?" he asked the priests.

BLAMING THE lack of community spirit on a "Jesus and Mentality "which is possible for people to tolerate slavery, racial discrimination and injustice," Msgr. Cantwell said that parishioners, led by the priest, can "rediscover the community spirit around the altar."

"Only when our people have a real experience of being a community can there be a real apostolic going forth which will effect the necessary changes," he concluded.

Pope Paul

Catholic Action Needs Defined

Vatican City — (NC) — His Holiness Pope Paul VI said here that Catholic Action needs "men and women of thought and of action" who want to Christianize modern society.

The Pope spoke at a special general audience (July 25) in the Vatican's San Damaso Courtyard to a Catholic Action group —300 priest-moderators of Italian Catholic Action and boy scouts on their way to Greece for an international jamboree August 1 to 11.

POPE PAUL told the priest-moderators that Catholic Action will keep its present structure and function.

He told the scouts he is sending a special letter to them at their jamboree.

In what amounted to a major policy speech on Catholic Action, the Pope said:

"We will say immediately that it is Our wish that Catholic Action should remain substantially as outlined by the authority and wisdom of Our venerable predecessors of recent decades.

It is now part of the constitutional design of the Church. Its form varies according to different countries; its traditions, requirements and development vary. But its definition as cooperation of the laity in the hierarchical apostolate of the Church remains . . .

"It remains as a duty for whoever is responsible for promoting the pastoral care and education of laymen in the apostolic activity of the Church. It remains above all as a vocation which is offered to laymen. It enables the latter to pass from an inert and passive concept of Christian life to a conscious and active one, to pass from a state of being Christian in name rather than in fact — foreign to understanding and participating in the problems of the Church—to a state of being convinced faithful who can and must share the Church's completeness as a community and its active responsibility.

"WE WILL say more: it is Our wish that Catholic Action should recover its strength and acquire new skill in attracting to itself generous souls, youthful and strong minds, men and women of thought and of action, and used for instilling Christian Catholics who wish to be heard life in modern society.

"We ask you above all to have confidence in this form of apostolate in the Church . . . and to seek out the new resources it needs to remain alive and effective in its profound immersion in the fonts of truth, liturgy and grace, in its close adherence to the hierarchy . . .

"The second suggestion concerns more the laity than the clergy who direct and assist Catholic Action; namely, that laymen may consider Catholic Action as their own work, not only designed for them but also formed and promoted by them, unquestionably linked with the ecclesiastical hierarchy and destined indeed to give the latter obedience and help."

The Pope spoke in French to the scouts, meeting in Rome "under the ideal flag of friendship."

He praised their activity and good works.

"All this expresses the vitality of the scouting formula," he said, "which is not subject to the wear and tear of time but, on the contrary, acquires through time rich experience and a constantly great conviction of its fruitfulness and modern character.

"WE CONGRATULATE you for this magnificent phenomenon of youthful pedagogy, and it is Our hope that it may develop constantly more, taking always into consideration the complexity and hierarchy of the requirements to which the education of youth must be dedicated so that life may acquire its ful human, physical, intellectual, spiritual and religious value.

"We have been told that your meeting in Rome is only a stopover on a much longer journey, for you are on your way to Greece for your forthcoming jamboree to which We are soon sending a message signed by Ur."

Curia Prefect

Vatican City — Pope Paul VI has named Ildebrando Cardinal Antoniutti as the new prefect of the Vatican's Sacred Congregation of Religious, the agency concerned with monks, brothers and nuns. The post was left vacant by the death of Valerio Cardinal Valeri, a member of the Curia. Cardinal Antoniutti, 64, had been mentioned as a possible candidate for the papacy in the conclave which elected Pope Paul in June. Former Papal Nuncio to Spain, the new prefect was created a cardinal by the late Pope John XXIII last year. His appointment was the first major one made by Pope Paul in the Curia. (CRNS Photo)
