THE SACRED VESSELS

THE CHALICE (from the Catholic Encyclopedia, Vol III, Page 561).

The chalice, the cup in which the wine and water of the Eucharistic Sacrifice are contained, occupies the first place among the sacred vessels. So far as it is possible to collect any scraps of information regarding the chalices used by early Christians, the evidence seems to favor the prevalence of glass, though cups of the precious and of baser metals, of ivory, wood, horn and even clay were also in use. According to the existing laws of the Church the chalice, or at least the cup of it, must be made either of gold or silver, and in the latter case the bowl must be gold on the inside. In circumstances of great poverty or in time of persecution a calix stanneus (pewter) may be permitted, but the bowl of this also, like the upper surface of the paten must be gilt. Before the chalice and paten are used in the sacrifice of the Mass they require consecration. This consecration must be performed by a bishop (or, in the case of chalices intended for monastic use, by an abbot possessing the privilege), and a bishop cannot in an ordinary way delegate any priest to perform this function in his place. The chalice loses its consecration when it becomes unfit for the purpose for which it is destined.

THE PATEN (from the Catholic Encyclopedia, Vol. XI, Page 511.)

The paten is a small shallow dish or plate of precious metal on which the element of bread is offered to God at the Offertory of the Mass and upon which the consecrated Host is placed after the Fraction. It should be made of the same material as the chalice, and if it is made of anything else than gold it should be gilt on the concave side. The paten's edge ought to be thin and sharp so that the particles on the corporal may be easily collected. In the earliest times the patens, like the chalices, were probably constructed of glass, wood and copper as well as of gold and silver.

THE CIBORIUM (from the Catholic Encyclopedia, Vol. III, Page 767.)

The ciborium is a chalice-like vessel used to contain the Blessed Sacrament. According to modern liturgical usage, it is employed for the distribution of Holy Communion in churches and for the reservation of the consecrated particles in the tabernacle. In shape the ciborium resembles a chalice, but the cup or bowl is round rather than oblong and provided with a conical cover surmounted by a cross or some other appropriate device. The material should be gold or silver (baser metals are sometimes allowed), but the interior of the cup must be lined with gold. While containing the Sacred Species it should be covered with a small white veil of gold or cloth of gold and may not be handled except by sacred ministers, when empty and purified it may be touched by all clerics, and by lay persons if specially authorized.

ALTAR WINE (from the Catholic Encyclopedia, Vol I, Page 338)

The juice of the grape naturally and properly fermented is to be used, but wine made of raisins provided that from its color and taste it may be judged pure, is permissible.

ALTAR BREADS (from the Catholic Encyclopedia, Vol I, Page 338.)

To insure valid consecration the following points must be observed: (1) The host must be made of wheaten flour. If the host is not made of wheaten flour or is mixed with flour of another kind in such quantity that it cannot be called wheat bread, it cannot be used. (2) It must be mixed with natural water. Otherwise if distilled water is used the consecration becomes of doubtful validity. (3) It must be baked in an over or between two heated iron moulds and it must not be corrupted. If the host begins to be corrupt it would be a grievous offense to use it, but it would be considered valid matter. For a more concise treatment on the following points see (4) At present unleavened bread is used in the Western Church and leavened bread in the Eastern with but few exceptions. It is probable that Christ used unleavened bread at the institution of the Blessed Eucharist, because the Jews were not allowed to have leavened bread in their houses on the days of the Azymes. (2) The hosts must be recently made. The rubrics do not specify the term "recently" in speaking of the host. In practice those older than three weeks ought not to be used. (3) The hosts must be round in form and neither chipped nor broken. (4) The large hosts should be at least two and three-quarter inches in diameter. The small hosts for the communion of the laity should be about one and two-fifths inches in diameter. When the people could not otherwise hear Mass, or when Viaticum is to be administered, Mass may be said with a small host if a large one is not obtainable. As a rule the image of Christ Crucified should be impressed on the large host, but the monogram of the Holy Name or of the Sacred Heart may also be adopted.

CRUETS (from the Catholic Encyclopedia, Vol. IV, Page 543.)

The cruets are two small vessels used to contain the wine and water required for the Holy Sacrifice of the Mass. They are generally of glass, but other materials are used, such as gold, silver and other precious metals. In such cases it is advisable to have a V (vinum) on the wine and an A (aqua) on the water cruet so that one may be easily distinguished from the other.

Sunday's Mass

A GUIDE TO THE LITURGICAL YEAR

By The REV. PAUL BUSSARD
(Editor, The Leaflet Missal)

QUINQUAGESIMA

Lent is very near now. Wednesday is Ash Wednesday, when Christians shall have ashes put on their foreheads when they shall be told that they are dust and that they shall return to dust.

This week they begin to think what they will do during Lent to make their souls ready for Heaven when their bodies begin to turn to dust. The Epistle is a preliminary warning. Whatever they do, prayer, fasting, almsgiving, is of no avail unless it is done in the love of God.

We are like the blind man who sat by the wayside in the Gospel. We do not understand the things that are to come to pass as least as well as we could and should. We can very justly ask that we may see. Or as the Offertory Chant asks, "Lord, teach me Thy decrees." We shall try to learn them. We shall say over all the judgments of God so that we shall not forget them.

Our Lord was on the way to Jerusalem and all the suffering of Good Friday when He gave sight to the man who sat by the road. Like him we should get up, follow Christ, glorify God, during the Lenten Season.

Home Negro Mission Activity Wish of Holy Father, States Leader in Movement Here

Promotion of mission activities among the Negroes of America is the expressed desire of the present reigning Pontiff, Pius XI declared the Rev. John C. O'Donnell director of Aquinas Institute Mission Unit, in an interview last Tuesday.

Father O'Donnell spoke as a representative of the St. Peter Claver Society of Rochester, sponsors of a public meeting on "Inter-Racial Cooperation," to be held in Columbus Civic Centre Building on Sunday, March 1. James E. Cuff, prominent layman and attorney will be chairman.

Coming from New York to address the meeting on the promotion of mission workers in the cause of the Negro, the Rev. Linn LaFarge, S. J. associate editor of America and Elmo M. Anderson, member of the board of directors of the Catholic Interracial Council of New York.

Father O'Donnell called attention to the working of a resolution on the negro question adopted at the 1933 Convention of the Catholic Students' Mission Crusade.

"BE it resolved," he quoted, "that the C. S. M. C. in convention assembled go on record as opposed to all un-American and anti-Catholic principles enunciated in face practice:

"And be it further resolved, That all Crusaders refrain from using words which might blind the Negro to the true nature of Catholicity.

"And be it finally resolved, That the student Crusaders recognize that the Negro is a human being and as a citizen, is entitled to the essential opportunities of life and the full measure of social justice.

"That resolution" commented Father O'Donnell, "constituted a splendid expression of Ameri. in Catholic youth and it deserves to be thought about and acted upon by all Catholics."

Statistics relating to the comparative position of the Negro and the Catholic Church in America are scanty, the priest remarked, and not altogether accurate. However, he regarded the following figures taken from "The Inter-Racial Field," as worthy of study.

Number of Negroes in U. S.	13,000,000
Estimated No. of Protestant Negroes	5,000,000
Estimated No. of Catholic Negroes	250,000
Estimated No. of Negroes churched	2,750,000
No. of Negroes attending Colleges	2,000
No. of Catholic Negro Churches	200
No. of Catholic Negro Schools	35
Negro Enrollment Catholic Schools	9,000
Priests engaged in Colored Missions	250
Sisters engaged in Colored Missions	1,100

ACT ON STATE BILLS PENDING

Consideration of legislation now pending at Albany and action in support of favorable bills and against undesirable measures comprised the business transacted at the regular monthly meeting of the Catholic Central Verein of America, Rochester Branch Sunday afternoon in St. Joseph's Hall. Election of officers took place.

The Branch went on record in opposition to the following bills: Assembly Bill Int 943 by Mr Mangano providing for full time vocational and trade schools and providing further for payment under certain conditions of $20.00 a month to pupils attending such schools. Assembly Bill Int 274 by Mr Roux providing for publication of certain legal notices in Sunday newspapers; Assembly Bill Int 321 by Mr. Bernhardt providing for payment of at least $20.00 a month to person receiving old age relief. Assembly Bill Int 694 providing for remarriage of the guilty person in actions for divorce within one year instead of three years; Assembly Bill Int. 738 by Miss Todd adding desertion for three consecutive years without reasonable cause as an additional ground for absolute divorce; Assembly Bill Int. 78 providing for ratification of the so-called Child Labor Amendment. opposition to this bill is based on the fact that it would give to Congress the absolute power to regulate the labor of all persons until they are about to enter their 19th year. Assembly Bill Int 128 which would permit the filing of an application for annulment of marriage after a period of three years of incurable insanity instead of five years as at present; Senate Bills Int 335, 306, 307 and 318 providing for women jurors. These bills were opposed on the ground that they would tend further to remove women from the home and thus harmfully affect family life.

The Branch went on record in favor of the following bills: Senate Bill Int 261 by Mr Keil, providing that children attending other than public schools, convenient shall be afforded them as well as the public school children. This is known as the so-called Lundy bill. Assembly Bill Int 154 providing for state aid for regular instruction given in schools other than the public schools. Senate Bill Int. 158 providing that no person shall as a condition of securing employment or continuing employment be required to be fingerprinted.
