Catholics In American History

CATHOLICS IN AMERICAN HISTORY
ANTONIO MARGIL

One of the greatest of the early missionaries in the New World, Father Antonio Margil is known as the "Apostle of Guatemala" for his labors among the Indians in this region and he is prominently connected with the early history of Texas.

He entered the Franciscan Order when he was 16 years old in his native city of Valencia, Spain and following his ordination he volunteered for service in the missionary [illegible]. He accordingly landed at Vera Cruz, Mexico, and was assigned at the famous missionary college of Santa Cruz, Querétaro.

He traveled much over Yucatan, Costa Rica, Nicaragua, and Guatemala. He became the first guardian of the missionary college of Guadalupe, Zacatecas, a position to which he was re-elected late in life, and for six years he devoted himself to missionary work in Texas and Louisiana.

In Texas he found missions among the Nacogdoche Indians, the Ais and the Adaes. These missions were discovered by the French and Father Margil returned to the neighborhood of the present city of San Antonio where he remained for about a year. Returning his Texas missions, he continued on into Louisiana where he devoted himself unsparingly to the settlers. Returning to Mexico he continued his missionary work until his death at 79 years of age. He went barefooted, abstained from meat or fish, ate very little, spending long hours of the night in meditation and prayer, and achieved extraordinary success. In 1936 Pope Gregory XVI declared Father Margil Venerable.

LIVING WAGES AND THE CONSTITUTION

[illegible] constitutional [illegible] the NRA. But [illegible] the right of [illegible] Congress [illegible] the Supreme Court [illegible] surely there is no freedom for [illegible] the states [illegible] the economic [illegible] of the Catholic [illegible] of organized [illegible] self government.

[illegible] the power of either the federal or the state governments to do [illegible] Now [illegible] It is true, as the Encyclical describes, that [illegible] without [illegible] of the wave of government [illegible] situation. [illegible] that [illegible] now [illegible] and more [illegible] to industries, [illegible] the legal right of [illegible] collective bargaining [illegible] their interest [illegible]

[illegible] Prosperity is clearly realized [illegible] Circuitous way. The workers must get a living. They must get fair wages. If the [illegible] the fault of bad [illegible] lack of enterprise of [illegible] it is the "sin of which [illegible] called "unjust [illegible] crying to Heaven." What then?

[illegible] left up to [illegible] Liberty League and the Supreme Court. If so the situation is hopeless now and forever. For the condition now is simply a huge scale and who's afraid of the common old [illegible] that we followed before the depression began. Labor and the government are to step in to help the situation, the Encyclical says. For social justice demands reforms without delay which will guarantee every adult workingman a just wage.

Labor and the government are not [illegible] employers and labor are to put their heads together to try to work out a solution. They are to be helped by "wise measures of the public authority."

When companies cannot ride the waves with that help, then let them, the Encyclical says face the question of closing their doors and making some other provision for the working people. But that particular bit of kindly realism is incidental at this point.

The question now is of setting up a method of joint employer-labor control helped by government to get a living wage for every man in the country. It is a question of how to end the Depression which has now dragged its weary length along for over six years. The TVA decision does not change the NRA and AAA decisions.
