Clergy, Laity Invited To Press Meet

Fitzpatrick Asks Large Attendance for C.P.A. Gathering Here

A general invitation to the clergy and laity of the United States to attend the national convention of the Catholic Press Association here May 20, 21 and 22 was issued this week by Vincent de Paul Fitzpatrick, president of the association.

Mr. Fitzpatrick's action followed a recent Baltimore conference with the Most Rev. John Mark Gannon, Bishop of Erie and Episcopal Chairman of the Press Department of the National Catholic Welfare Conference.

New Program Planned

The invitation to the convention is extended, Mr. Fitzpatrick says, at the direction of the Executive Board of the C.P.A. and with the enthusiastic indorsement of Bishop Gannon. He told Bishop Gannon, he adds, that the Executive Board of the C.P.A. has decided that the program for the Rochester convention shall be somewhat different from the programs of conventions in the past.

Summarizing Bishop Gannon's views on the forthcoming convention, Mr. Fitzpatrick states that the Bishop believes the C.P.A. should become one of the major Catholic organizations of the country, that its meetings and deliberations should be of importance not only to the Catholic Press, but to all the public and the secular press as well, that in the future C.P.A. conventions should open with Solemn Pontifical Mass; that the members of the Hierarchy should be invited to attend the C.P.A. conventions."

Mr. Fitzpatrick says Bishop Gannon "is an enthusiastic and sincere admirer of the work being done by the Catholic Press", that "he has great faith in the potentialities of the Catholic Press Association"; that he believes "the immediate need is the consolidation of our forces, unity of expression, concentration on definite targets no wasted ammunition."

Spain Fights 'Red' Yoke Says War Vet

Member of Franco's Forces Explodes False Propaganda $n Talk Here

Spain today is making a desperate effort to throw off the strangle hold of Communism, Luis Bermijillo, a veteran of General Franco's army, told an audience of 500 men and women in Columbus Civic Centre, Sunday evening.

False American ideas about the conditions in Spain were blamed by Senor Bermijillo on vicious propaganda in his address opening the Knights of Columbus campaign against Communism.

"If you were to follow the accounts in the American press, you would think that this is a war between Communism and Fascism. That is not true," the young Spaniard declared.

About Fascist Aid

"True it is that we have received help from Germany and Italy, Fascist countries, but their interest is not to make Spain Fascist, but rather to prevent the carrying out of a boast made in Moscow some years ago that Spain would be the next country to go Communistic, then with the extremities of Europe Communistic it would not be long before all Europe would follow.""

Branding as a lie that the civil war in Spain was the result of the wealth of the Catholic Church, he said:

"The Church in Spain lost all of its property in 1837 and that property has never been restored."

The statement that there are too many churches and too many priests in Spain, he declared, was the result of ignorance. The Catholic population of Spain is about the same as that of the United States. Spain is a Catholic country, the United States is not. Yet, he emphasized, there are more priests and more churches in the United States today than there were in Spain before the revolution's outbreak.

Causes of the Revolt

It was with the cry of "Law and order must prevail," and "God and religion must remain," that the Royalists, Carlists, right-wing Republicans and officers of the Army and Navy comprising Franco's army threw themselves into the struggle to oppose the Socialists, Communists, and Anarchists in control of the Madrid government, said the Franco veteran.

Atrocities, which he has seen, religious persecution, burning of churches, slaughter of nuns and priests, which were perpetrated, he said, by those now in power in Spain prior to the present revolution brought about the uprising of those now banded together under General Franco, Bermijillo explained.

Senor Bermijillo, a graduate student at Cornell University, was heard on a program featured also by an address by the Rev. Donald M. Cleary, Catholic Chaplain at Cornell. They were presented by James E. Cuff, chairman.

"If the Catholic Church presents as a point in her program that she is unalterably [illegible] hate and greed, [illegible] love, that she stands [illegible] opposed to war." [illegible] declared in his address [illegible] tion, "Does the Catholic Church Favor War?"

Msgr. Sheen Spurns 'United Front' Offer of Communists

citizens have absolutely no right to put forward candidates.

In this Communism is like Nazi-[illegible] where the German citizen can "rubber stamp" only the candidates offered by the Nazi Party.

Would we consider America democratic if the President outlawed all rival parties, and permitted us at the next election to vote only for Democrats? Instead of democracy it would be a trick to uphold the autocratic tyranny of a few leaders

It is just that in Russia, and that is why in Russia the citizen has lost his right to disagree, which is important in any regime but in particular against a regime such as in Russia where Molotov, the President of the Council of the People's Commissariat said. "In the course of elections, no one will dare show his nose, for the dictatorship of the proletariat will strike without pity." (Izvestia, Oct. 23, 1934). The Official Organ of Communistic Labor in Russia unwittingly told the truth when it said: "The sole possibility with Communism is: One party is in power, and all the others are in jail." (Troud, Nov. 13, 1937).

Workers' Rights Hit

3. The democratic right of a worker to unite in unions to protect their interests, and to strike if need be to attain legitimate wages and working conditions, is also denied by the new Soviet Constitution.

It is true that Article 118 gives the citizen the "right to work," but that is not enough. He also wants the right not to work, or the right to strike. But if a citizen went on strike in Russia, he would run up against Article 131 which makes him guilty of "infringing upon public socialist property as—an enemy of the people," and that last phrase brings him under the Criminal Code. There is one of the great mysteries about Communism.

Here in America, you encourage strikes and violence; and in Russia where conditions are worse, you exile or shoot a man for striking. I say "shoot" because that is what the Official Daily of Moscow recommended be done to the workers of Don and Kouban: "They must be shot, and shot, and shot." (Pravda, Dec. 9, 1932). Communism also denies that democratic right of the workers to "unite in unions to protect their interests." They may unite in unions (Article 126) but only "to strengthen and develop the socialist system," which comes first: the "right of a man to a decent wage and freedom" or the "socialist system?"

Disorganizer of Labor

How the Daily Worker would protest if unions were established only to "develop the capitalist system," but what is Communism but a Super-Capitalist State where the State is boss?

At least the workingman in America can leave one employer for another, but in Russia there is only one employer—the State, and if he refuses to work for the State the Communist Party writes across his passport "disorganizer of labor." And conditions are so bad in some factories, that citizens prefer to be among the floating population (the Soviet word for "unemployed") rather than submit to the hardships of the Red bureaucrats.

For example, in the Communist factory at Magnitogorsk which Soviet propaganda calls "one of the greatest triumphs of socialist structure," laborers are leaving constantly, despite the penalties, rather than submit to conditions.

"The twelve locomotives employed in mineral transport have, in the space of two years, changed their mechanics 460 times. In the repair shop during the same period 200,000 workmen have been employed successively on 70 machines. Only a small proportion of the population live in the stone houses which are scandalously built.

Hardly have the tenants settled in, but they must proceed to repairs. The main portion of the operatives live in sheds. In most of these hovels, bugs, dust, and refuse rules the roost. Most of the time the cooking is repulsive; there are practically no clean or well lighted places in which to eat" (The Bolshevik, April 15, 1934). Imagine being declared "an enemy of the people" for striking against such conditions!

In the concluding article of his reply, Monsignor Sheen tells Communists why Catholics will not join with them, preferring to be "loyal to our God and to our country."
