Tax Threat Perils U.S. School Bill

Opposition To Proposed Law Mounts; Dr. Johnson Hits It

WASHINGTON Congress appears to be heading toward uncharted fiscal reefs which are dampening somewhat the ardor of the sponsors of various ambitious projects which would require the expenditure of hundreds of millions of dollars if they were carried out.

One of these is Federal aid to the States for education.

Bills are under way which contemplate the allotment of sums up to $100,000,000 annually for the aid of public schools The money would be distributed on the basis of the school population of the States—those ordinarily regarded as of school age the idea being that educational facilities should be virtually uniform throughout the country

Resembles Other Measures

These measures bear a certain resemblance to earlier measures to establish a Federal Department of Education The idea of a Department was never approved by Congress and was subsequently dropped

The Federal aid idea, which was a part of it, was retained This too encountered opposition Now the Federal aid idea is again in the congressional hopper and has been endorsed by organizations which backed the original Department of Education plan

The bills contain the usual stipulation that the money should be expended by the States and public schools are specifically named to be the beneficiaries and that the Federal government should have no hand in the shaping of educational policy. This has, heretofore, not been a very convincing assurance for once the Federal Government appropriates the money it is argued it will sooner or later have something to say about how it is to be expended

Budget Deficit Looms

But that is not the main obstacle to the carrying of the educational project. Argument is centering not upon how the money may be spent, but upon how it is to be raised Senator Robinson, Majority leader of the Senate, has called attention to the fact that if the money for this and other projects is to be appropriated Congress must impose new taxes to pay for them

Already the shadow of a prospective budget deficit of large proportions is deepening. Revenues have not come up to expectations The question of making ends meet is daily becoming more acute The President himself has stated that the most difficult phase of the responsibility of raising more revenue

Dr. Johnson Sees Danger In Measure

WASHINGTON Enactment of the Harrison-Black-Fletcher Bill for Federal aid to public schools "would do definite harm to American education," the Rev Dr George Johnson of the Catholic University of America, Director of the Department of Education of the National Catholic Welfare Conference and Secretary General of the National Catholic Educational Association told the House of Representatives Committee on Education The Committee is now concluding hearings on this bill

"It would make for the consolidation of the status quo and postpone much needed reform," Dr. Johnson told the Congressional group

The proponents of the Harrison-Black-Fletcher Bill have emphasized the fact that certain States in the Union lack the necessary wealth to provide the kind of educational facilities that are necessary at the present time They have made much of the argument for the equalization of educational opportunity. Yet there is no assurance whatever that the passage of this bill will guarantee any substantial improvement in our American schools."

IT'S CHERRY BLOSSOM TIME

It may be cherry blossom time along the Potomac, but these little girls of the Catholic mission school in Sinyangchow, southern Honan Province, China, are glad that they too may enjoy the Spring blossoms. More than 1,200 children attend the 40 schools of this mission, which is served by the Fathers of the Divine Word Society and the Sisters Servants of the Holy Ghost, of Steyl, Holland. (N.C. Back Elmira Council In Sponsoring Films

ELMIRA Catholics here are giving full cooperation to the Elmira Community Motion Picture Council in sponsoring the presentation of three pictures of outstanding merit at the Regent Theater, on the last three Fridays in April

The movement is a part of Elmira's ever-increasing cultural program

The three films are "Man of Aran" scheduled for April 16 "The Blue Light" April 23 and "La Maternelle" April 30

Tickets are being sold by members of the council and may be obtained through Mrs Charles W Swift Mrs Malcolm P Ferguson Mrs Edmund Maloney, Mrs Benjamin Levy Mrs Benjamin Hampton Mrs Harry Harkson Mrs Marvin Johnson and Mrs. G T C Graham

First of the series will be "Man of Aran" to be shown Apr 16 a picture which was decreed the world best movie of 1935 by the National Board of Review Directed by Robert Flaherty it is a story of the Aran Islands a small rocky group off the coast of Ireland, where inhabitants wrest a difficult living from the land and sea

The [illegible] of the natives and the film an artistic triumph, was two years in the making No trees grow on the islands the only soil is manufactured from sand and seaweed man-made potato beds are frequently swept away by the ravaging ocean winds The story is the saga of a man whose only master was the sea slow in action, yet containing a depth of dramatic suspense seldom felt in run of the mill productions

"The Blue Light," a legend of the Italian Tyrol, and photographed there, a picture taken entirely in color will be presented Apr 23 The beautiful Leni Riefenstahl, director and actress, plays the leading role, a gypsy girl The story is based on the fatal blue light which appears on a nearby mountain peak at each full of the moon

When the film was first presented this year in New York City it was considered a social event of outstanding importance being sponsored by such prominent New Yorkers as the Vanderbilts, the Morgans and the Roosevelts

The third picture, "La Maternelle," is to be shown Apr 30. It is being a French film conversation is entirely in French but with English captions added at the premier of the film in the United States this year The plot deals with the heart-breaking lot of children of Montmartre, the slums of Paris, and stars Paulette Elambert the child actress, and Madeline Renaud The picture has been called one of the authentic masterpieces of contemporary cinema. It has been included in the Elmira group at the request of Elmira College faculty members

Previously such high class pictures as the three to be shown here, have appeared only in cities like Rochester and New York which support a Little Theatre. Their distribution is sponsored by the Little Theater movement. This is the first time such a group has been brought to a city the size of Elmira Future unusual presentations will depend on the success of the present project

'Problem Island' Is Subject Of National Essay Contest

PATERSON, N J "Problem Island," a new book by the Most Rev. Francis C Kelley, Bishop of Oklahoma City and Tulsa, has been made the subject of a nation-wide essay contest just announced by the St. Anthony Guild Press here.

The purpose is to promote wide discussion of the lesson contained in the volume which is a presentation of the truths of the Catholic Church in the form of a romantic novel.

The contest is not concerned with the literary merit of the book, but with the best presentation of its central idea, which, it is said, "is of vital interest to all thinkers"

Prizes totaling $175 are offered in the contest, as follows: first prize, $100, second prize, $50; and third prize, $25 Fourth prize is a de luxe copy of "Problem Island" autographed by the author The contest is open to any lay person, Catholic or non-Catholic, except those connected with the teaching staffs of educational institutions.

The essays entered in this contest should not exceed 1,200 words, and should deal with either the way Bishop Kelley develops his central thesis or some general aspect of the thesis that applies to society, says the announcement Manuscripts should be typed on one side of the paper only, double-spaced, and with one-inch margins. They should not be signed, but a sealed envelope containing full particulars regarding the writer should be attached to each manuscript. All manuscripts must be in the hands of the judges by May 10 They are to be addressed to the Problem Island Contest Editor, St. Anthony Guild Press, 38 Main Street, Paterson, N. J.

SETTLED...OR UNSETTLED?
SETTLING an estate, no matter how small, is not an easy job. In fact, if the executor deviates even slightly from the proper legal-financial path, the estate is likely to be unsettled. As bankers, we see that happen every so often...too often.
Take, for example, the case of the wife who becomes executor of her husband's estate. Her life has been devoted to her family; her experience in business matters is negligible. Suddenly, at the worst possible time, she is called upon to consider legal and financial problems which, even with expert help and advice, tax her judgment. Details that seem petty but must be attended to come up constantly. Her obligation, though willingly shouldered, becomes a burden.
That is why many women who know what executorship means strongly favor designating a Trust Company for the task; why many lawyers recommend it when the principal heirs are women. Such duties are routine for the bank...though here at the Central Trust, many people say, the tradition of friendly banking raises them above that.
But each estate presents individual problems. In considering yours, why not first see what a booklet we have prepared has to say on the subject? It's yours for the asking.
