You know I've never had much of a home, and feel awfully happy over the prospect of having such a nice mother and sister and the sweetest wife in the world. And now good-by. Don't forget the day!" and the happy fellow went away as if walking on air.

The appointed hour found myself and wife knocking at the door of Mrs. Faye's cozy little flat. Frank presented us to his future mother and the minister—Mr.
Haines, Frank's partner, we knew already —and then stepped to the door of the next room and handed out the bride, who was followed by her sister and her friend.
The bride wore a simple white gown with a veil falling over her face. Miss Duncan, a pretty blonde, was in blue.
Kate Faye, a slip of a girl, dark haired and dark eyed, wore pink. The minister soon made the happy pair one, and after the bride's mother and the young ladies had kissed and cried over her a little while my wife and I stepped forward to be presented and offer our congratulations.

The new Mrs. Howard was all that her lover's fond fancy had painted her. A graceful girl of medium height, with soft brown eyes, a lovely complexion, a sweet mouth about which played pretty dimples, and wavy brown hair worn in a heavy coil at the back of a shapely head, and falling in tiny rings upon a low, white brow. When my name was mentioned she looked up with a deep blush, which quickly receding left her very pale.
In a low musical voice, whose tones were strangely familiar to my ear, she thanked us for our good wishes.

After some simple refreshments the bride went away to put on her traveling dress, and as they were about to depart I stood beside her for a moment. She turned to speak to her husband, and I saw what answered my question. "Where had I heard that voice?" Just below the left ear was a tiny, star shaped spot, showing white through the rosy blush called up by her husband's tone and glance.

They went away a happy couple and returned more in love, if possible, with each other than before. I have been settled; as you know, in this place for a number of years. I don't see Frank Howard very often nowadays, but our friendship has suffered no change. I do not know though whether he and his wife, devoted as they are to each other, have exchanged confidences on the mustache question or no. They have made no sign. Neither have I.—Mrs. Juliette

Dainty Mosaic Work.
In the matter of daintiest handiwork think of a face wrought in mosaic in which 1,700,000 pieces were used, the largest of which was less in size than a millet seed! Such a trophy of patient labor is recorded of an artisan who in such minute detail has given the portrait of Paul V, who lived in the Sixteenth century.—Exchange.

The Skin.
A normal condition of the skin is the chief protection against a cold. Three-fourths of the sufferers from catarrhal pneumonia or chronic bronchitis are found to be in the habit of neglecting the skin. Their skin has become degraded, and is no longer a protective covering for the body.

The skin needs to be hardened by the use of the flesh brush, the cold douche, the air bath and by frequent change of underclothing. Active exercise needs to be added to keep the tissues from clogging. The time to cure the patient is before he gets the cold.—Hall's Journal of Health.

ORIGIN OF THE CENSUS.

MOSES TOOK THE FIRST ONE IN THE WILDS OF THE DESERT.

How the Citizens of Greece Were Counted Under the Direction of Solon—Exact and Complete Information First Obtained by Augustus Caesar.

The most ancient statistical record of the kind is that of Moses in the wilderness. That enumeration must have been exceedingly simple, as shown by the first chapter of the fourth book of the Pentateuch. "Take ye," says this account, "the sum of all the congregations of the children of Israel after their families, by the house of their fathers, with the number of their names, every male by their polls from 20 years old and upward, all that are able to go forth to war in Israel; thou and Aaron shall number them by their armies."

The names of the chief enumerators are also given, those who assisted Moses and Aaron being "the renowned of the congregation, princes of the tribes of their fathers, heads of thousands in Israel." Then the enumerators "assembled all the congregation on the first day of the second month, and they declared their pedigrees after their families by the house of their fathers, according to the number of names, from twenty years and upward, by the polls." This enumeration must have been an affair soon over, requiring probably no more than a day's time, being merely a counting of the heads of the fighting men. There was no counting of women or children or old men or cripples, and "the Levites were not numbered among them." Those who did stand up to be counted numbered 603,550.

THE CENSUS IN CHINA.
There is record of a census in China as far back as the year 2042 B. C., and of one in Japan the last century before Christ. Under the constitution of Solon the citizens of Athens were divided and registered into four classes according to the amount of their taxable property or income. The Roman census was burdened with more statistics than any of these simple enumerations. It originated under Servius Tullius, sixth king of Rome, and was an affair of much solemnity. It is not at all likely any man or woman was found sufficiently lost to fear of consequences to make faces at census officers or withhold desired information.

Every citizen had to appear upon the Campus Martius and declare upon oath his name and dwelling and the value of his property under the penalty of having his goods confiscated and of being scourged and sold for a slave. There was no trouble about having such a census full and complete. It had the benefit, too, of making the people to be counted anxious to find the census man, while he was not put to the labor of going from house to house to find the people. Augustus Caesar, who had a great head for detail, when he had the population numbered greatly enlarged the scope of the census and improved the method of taking it.

The census of modern Europe is comparatively recent. No exact popular enumerations were made in the Seventeenth century, but in the Eighteenth great progress was made in the development of statistical science. In Russia the taking of the census in a crude way began in 1700, and in 1719, under Peter the Great, though improvement had been made, females were omitted from the enumeration.

IN EUROPEAN COUNTRIES.
Census taking in Prussia dates from the time of Frederick William II. The Prussian census of today is very exact and complete. It is taken by civil officers in one day by means of printed schedules. The first census in Austria was taken in 1754, and for 100 years was taken each three years for military purposes only. In Sweden the science of statistics has been particularly cultivated, and Belgium ranks among the first nations of the world in completeness of its national statistics. In Italy the returns of this character are very complete, the range of inquiries having been greatly extended. The movement of the population is determined from civil registers kept by the municipal authorities. In Turkey enumeration is imperfect, the chief object of taking it being to provide a basis for taxation and conscription. In France the first census of which records are extant was taken in 1700.

Of course, as in everything pertaining to statistics, work of that kind is thorough in France. The first census of Great Britain was taken in 1801, and embraced the sex, but not the age of all subjects. The families and occupations were classified, so as to exhibit the number employed in agriculture, in trade and manufactures or handicrafts and those not comprised in the classes. Blank or householders' schedules are now left all over the kingdom by an army of enumerators, and these are required to be filled up on the night of April 2, and are collected by the enumerators the following day. The police assist in enumerating the houseless population. The army and navy are returned by the naval and military authorities.—Indianapolis Journal.

Man's First Love.

Probably your first love and your first watch were contemporary; they generally are. Have you forgotten the 12-year-old coquette for whose sake you forswore solid food, and moped disconsolate in solitary places, and coveted unattainable personal adornments and longed to be 21? Of course, you have not. A dozen tides of passion may have surged through your heart since then, but they have not washed away the memory of your "calf love."—New York Ledger.

William Waldorf Astor has employed artists at an expense of something like $10,000 to illustrate one copy of each of his novels. These copies form a private edition de luxe, each one being labeled "my personal copy" and occupying a prominent place in his library. Verily few can thus indulge in the embellishment of their own literature.

Writing for the Newspapers.

I am very frequently asked whether the newspaper is the best starting-point for young authors, and in this question lies, in nine cases out of ten, a grave misconception. Many young writers believe that work rejected by the monthly magazine will find a market with the daily newspaper. It seems to be taken for granted that the same degree of care is unnecessary for newspaper work as for magazine writing. "The newspaper dies with the day, the magazine lives for a month," is the general feeling, and hence the impression that ephemeral work will find a ready market with the newspaper.

It has been my pleasure to write for the newspaper press of America for six or seven years, and I give young writers a leaf from my experience when I say to them, do not allow yourselves to believe that minor work will find favor with the modern American newspaper. There is just as much demanded of a writer in the newspaper editorial office as in that of the monthly magazine. A writer commits the greatest mistake of her life when she looks upon the newspaper as a graduating school to the magazine. The same standard of grammar and expression set by the magazine holds good with newspapers.—Edward W. Bok in Ladies' Home Journal.

Her Little Brother's Bet.

Little Tommy was entertaining one of his sister's admirers until she appeared.

"Don't you come to see my sister?" he inquired.

"Yes, Tommy, that's what I come for."

"You like her immensely, don't you?"

"Of course I admire her very much. Don't you think she's nice?"

"Well, I have to, 'cause she's my sister; but she thumps me pretty hard sometimes. But let's see you open your mouth once. Now shut it tight till I count ten. There—I knowed you could do it!"

"Why, Tommy, who said I couldn't?"

"Oh, nobody but sister!"

"What did she say?"

"Well, she said you hadn't sense enough to keep your mouth shut, and I bet her two big apples you had; and you have, haven't you? And you'll make her stump up the apples, won't you?"

The young man did not wait to see whether she would "stump up" or not.—New York Ledger.

A Snake Story Brought Him Fortune.

A resident of Martinsville, Ind., named Jerry Givens, has received a letter from a rich uncle in California which indicates that the young man is likely to be adopted and made his heir. A strange family history is recalled by this incident. There was an estrangement between the man now in California and the father of young Jerry, who is long since dead. Henry, the elder brother, drifted to the far west, and discovered the whereabouts of his young heir only through a publication which narrated a remarkable adventure in which the latter was engaged. Some time ago while hunting in the White river bottoms he encountered a great nest of snakes. This circumstance gained wide reputation in the papers and finally caught the eye of the elder Givens.—Exchange.

An English sailor, coming up the British channel after a long journey, exclaimed: "Thank goodness, we've done with them eternal blue skies and that blinding sunshine. This taste of good old English fog puts fresh life into a fellow."

As the result of weighing 208 newly born children to determine the weight of brain, the male infant's brain weighed 11.2 ounces and the female 11.0 ounces, the weight of the brain being to the body as one to eight or thereabout.
