Saint of 'Boyology'

The Saint of "Boyology" started his work under sad circumstances His father died when John was only two leaving a very poor mother to support three sons John worked as a shepherd and had to postpone his vocation for years As a young priest, he accompanied a holy elderly priest on his visits to the prisons in Turin, Italy There he saw many children in danger of learning worse evils He resolved to devote his life to rescue these outcasts.

On December 8, when the Christian drove away a ragged lad who refused to serve Mass, Father Bosco recalled the boy, became his friend and gradually drew other neglected children around him He taught them religion and encouraged them to a better life Many people criticized and opposed his efforts, thinking these boys not worth the trouble but Father Bosco persevered, got fifty priests and teachers to help him and started a religious Society under the patronage of St Francis de Sales. Father Bosco was extraordinarily clever at amusing and winning boys, tireless in leading them by gentleness to goodness and God. He died honored by Popes and Statesmen, and his society now numbers seven hundred houses caring for thousands of young men.

Playground equipment has been installed. The parish was established six years ago. There is a Catholic population of 300 in this town of 2,000 inhabitants.

All Suffer

Believe me, he who does not think of the wants of the poor is not a member of the body of Christ, for if one members suffers, all suffer.—St. Elphege, to the people of Winchester, England.

War Fails To Stop Medical Supplies

NEW YORK — Shipments made recently by the Catholic Medical Mission Board of New York seem to have a special protection as they arrive at their destination when even the mail fails to get there. Recently a missionary in Africa wrote to ask for another copy of the shipping invoice saying that the medical supplies had come safely but the invoice was lost at sea.

Another missionary wrote to say that the only quinine in the district was that which was sent by the Catholic Medical Mission Board The charitable feeling caused by war conditions seem to have stimulated the gifts of medicines, instruments, bandages and dressings in favor of the medical missions Many missions which have heretofore received medical supplies from Europe are now getting them from the Catholic Medican Mission Board.

DEFENSE MEASURE IN THE HOME—II

By FLORENCE JANE OVENS

Issued by the National Kindergarten Association, 8 West 40th Street, New York City. These articles are appearing weekly in our columns.

No loyal American woman is likely to ignore the call to serve our country which is being brought to her through the AMERICAN WOMEN'S VOLUNTARY SERVICES or one of its constituent organizations "Here I am—what shall I do?" is the usual eager response

There is work for all and it is proving a definite satisfaction to the A W V S to see that the volunteers are placed, trained and adjusted according to their own choice of service However crowded and binding the applicant's personal program already is if there is a will to serve, a way to do it will surely be found Those whose family ties prohibit outside engagements are being given work that can be accomplished at home

Now how will Mother's interest in the Defense Projects effect the children? How much should be explained to little boys and girls? Not only explanations but casual remarks even, such as will arouse fear, should be carefully avoided. There should be no air of mystery, for that in itself arouses fear. No despised enemy should be made a bogeyman. So long as we can find no good in our foe let us not bring him into the environment of young children. Instead, why not make plain, simple, truthful statements to them? "Mother's help is needed on this work. I will show you how you can help, too." If she is knitting a sweater for the army, she may say, "The soldier boys are doing some work for all of us, so Mother is very glad to knit sweaters for some of them. We want them to be comfortable, don't we?"

Then the question arises, to what extent should we care whether or not those outside of our family are comfortable and happy? To what extent should we teach little children that it is a matter for their concern?

Mr and Mrs Smith have four children There are ten neighboring families with whom they are quite well-acquainted They meet at church or social affairs And the children play together A catastrophe cannot come to one family without casting a shadow on each of the others If Mr and Mrs Smith wisely encourage their children to make sacrifices in order to help those in trouble all will be benefitted If they teach them that their neighbor's distress is no affair of theirs, tension dissatisfaction, indifference and finally self-centered purposes will result.

All peoples are nearer to us today than ever before The most distant country is our neighbor Little children should not be told the sad details of their playmates' troubles, and they should not listen to the recital of the horrors that go hand-in-hand with the bombing of cities. They will, however, quickly learn something regarding the distress that others in this suffering world are enduring, and as soon as they are old enough to understand this in the faintest degree whether the distress be at home or abroad—there should be given them an opportunity to make some effort to relieve it. This is an important principle in the building of a strong America. For when, on all levels, selfishness merges into kindness, well-being tends to become universal.

If we give all our time to God we always find time for our other duties—Blessed Mary of the Incarnation.
