What he Boy Window? The vering and much wexed question. that is the legal definition of a bay window? seems to be drawing toward a solution. How many windows shall a window contain? is the point made. These windows are all built of frame, and the difficulty with the inspectors is bo keep builders from overstepping their legal rights and constructing frame back buildings under the disguise of "bay windows." The claim is made that a bay window must be all windows that is, windows on the front and sides: others think that a window on the front is all that is necessary. The latview is taken by the builders of houses in rows where the bay windows of adjoining houses are so close as to prevent the possibility of privacy.

One builder who is building a row of houses in the upper section of the city thinks the law is doing him a wrong by compelling him to put three windows in his bay windows, which adcin each other in pairs, divided by a brick wall. He is not expected to put a window in the brick wall, but in the framework opposite, adding to the expense of the house and altering the hape of the room. The main reason for compelling builders to construct windows on all sides of the bay is prerention against fire. This argument is answered by the builders, who say that the frame apartments having the least number of windows burn the slowest. When windows become broken the draught is greatly increased, conse-quantly the danger is aggravated. To the losseness of the building laws many the complications constantly arising can be attributed. The ordinance of 1882 to regulat. the erection of oriel or bey windows throws no light whatever the subject. While the ordinance plates the construction of front bay dows, not a word is said about those the rear of buildings.—Philadelphia

Messages for Passengers.

Arrangements are being made for carrying out a scheme proposed by Mr. Mc-Well of Londonderry, for the more desputch of telegraphic communication between Tory Island and the minima, which promise to be of great advantage to ship owners and homeward bound passengers. It is proposed at steamers passing on either side of ory Island will throw overboard recepbacker something like a small bnoy, contaking the messages to be sent by teleis the necessit telegraph office. By this means it will be possible for a passenger o infimate his arrival to his friends os ob bluce se explore become de sould do so ow from Liverpool, and twenty hours before he could do so from any port on Civie. The matter has been taken by Lloyd's committee, who undertake to forward passengers' telegrams at a minimum of 1s. each and ship owners' advicerate minimum of 6d. each. It is serrected that the arrangement will soon be carried out. - Industries.

Recovering a Dismond Ring.

Inceday a gentleman, a stranger in these parts, had occasion to cross the Huntington bridge, and was accompanby a friend. When midway of the bridge he pulled a large and valuable dismond ring from the little finger of his left hand to exhibit to his friend. In handing the ring over it slipped from his hand and fell, and striking the floor consider into the river. The friend stood where the ring fell till its owner went and secured the services of several men to dive in after it. He found two who upon the offer of handseme pay for their services consented to attempt the rescue. They went out in a boat and after many attempts secured the ring, which was in form handed over to its owner. He paid the promised sum and went on his way rescience.—Hartford Courant.

Phases of Human Nature.

Springfield Homestead.

They were waiting for the train at a country station. There was a dreary looking waiting room, 14 by 14, and there was a platform 70 feet long by 8 broad. The scenery consisted of one water tank, five freight cars, two fields, one pile of lumber, three telegraph poles and a small boy. The rain poured outtide. The two women sat as far from each other as possible and regarded each other with suspicion and distrust,

One seemed to be saying to herself: "If she is going to the lunatic asylum she should be looked after. Who ever saw any one come out in such colors and mix things like that? Such persons are dangerous." And the other one remarked; "Must I wait here long in the company of that thing? What a looking head! What big feet and hands! Looks as if she was going to work on a farm."

The two men who are strangers to each other and to the women were fair. mild eyed specimens of the human race. They stood and looked at each other, and might have said to themselves: "Looks as if he had overdrawn his account at the bank. Seems to have an innocent look, but that is all put on." And the other might have mused: "So here's the 'Rubber Kid' out on another expedition, but I'll spoil his game. My, but hasn't he got a hardened look!" But they did nothing of the kind. While those women sat several feet apart, huddled up in an exclusive sort of way and their veils drawn, the men walked arm in arm, joked and smoked and talked stories and said they were glad to meet. They poked each other in the ribs, called and a boat's crew will be in read-sach other "old boy," borrowed some to pick them up and convey them | Sine cut and every match they had was shared in lighting cigars.

One of the women got up enough courare to ask the other for the time. The latter might be addressing the cook of an Erie canal scow, she thought, but replied that she had not the time. Then both shrank away under their veils andturned up their noses. When the train came along the men got into the same car and the same seat. The women came out with respective looks of disdain, entered separate coaches, and as the train moved away they were sorry they had noticed or spoken to each other and failed to stand on their individual dignity.—Albany Journal.

Bullet Presf Armor. In the early part of May some plate firing took place on board the English man-of-war Nettle, which brings up a subject of the greatest importance namely, the possibility of making armor such as will break up the splendid forged steel projectiles which have hitherto held together almost without exception The result of the Nettle and other recent tests goes to show that plates are now made with faces so hard as to defeat forged steel, and that it appears possible that steel faced armor in the future may dispose of them in the manner that Schneider admits such plates defeat indifferent projectiles.—New York Tele-
