Porpoise Shooting.

Porpoise shooting is the newest spor at Cape May, The seaward end of the pler is the favorite rendezvous for those who want to get a shot at the swiftly him from school and Mr. Scott gave moving fish. The marksman must have a steady hand and always be in readiness to shoot, because the movements of the porpoise are so uncertain that one does not have time to raise the gun to the shoulder before they are out of sight beneath the water. The women take as much interest in the sport as the men. and quite a number are out every afternoon perched on the lower deck of the pier, rifle in hand, and waiting for a good chance to shoot. The sport seems to lie more in the attempt to capture big game than in successful results, as it is quite rare for one of the fish to be killed and washed up on the shore.-Exchange.

Choosing.

Some twenty years ago Thomas Scott of Pennsylvania, one of the shrewdest and best-known of railway men in the country, who had worked his way up from a modest brakeman to the position of president of the great Pennsylvania railroad system, spent a few days in a country village. In the house where he boarded a modest, but good-looking and active lad of about lifteen attracted his notice. He asked the school teacher about the capacity of the boy.

"He is dull," was the reply. "Thickheaded, stupid and incapable, though willing enough to learn. His father wishes to make a druggist our of him, -but it is no use, he will never succeed."

Mr. Scott, watching the lad, ob served that in the affairs of daily life his judgment was clear and just, and books, but with the chores around the in Gormany for that didocse. house or some mechanical work. These are made in every color. They are cut into little cubes and arranged to form the design, and it is the out face which forms the picture surlace. The disadvantages are the disagreeable glitter of the glass and the diffculty of shaping the pieces."

"And the new method?" I was shown the maker of the glass at work. The workman has a shallow mold, into which he sifts from the perforated bottom of a tin jug a colored powder. From another jug he sifts another thickness of white powder, and then a considerable thickness of coarser powder, making altogether about a quarter of an inch. These powders are of ground glass and are fused by the heat of the fire into a solid Free Press. tile. The first powder is of the color the ity, the 15th day glass is intended to be, the second is white, to give quality to the surface color and to resist damp, and the third is timply a backing of coarser glass to give strength and thickness.

The tile is then out up into little pieces with a steel American wheel into the shapes required. "The advantage," continued Mr. Powell, "besides the superior color is that we use the surface instead of the out edge of the tile for the picture. And so we can out any shape we require. Thus, as in Mr. Holman Hunt's ploture, we can out pieces into the shape of a thumb nail, or of a nostril, or of parts of an eye, or of any of the little bits of drawing which go to make up a picture. In the old way these things would have to be made up of litle pubes, and of course the shapes would pet have been nearly so securate. By our method we are enabled to approach much nearer to pictorial effect—quite as near as is desirable in this class of deco-

HOW THE PIECES ARE PUT TOGETHER. "And the putting of the pieces to-ther?" . "There are several ways. The of obvious is to cement the glass piece by plece mpon the stonework. But that makes very uneven work, and it is diffi-ult to make alterations. The methods we actually practice are two-namely. face down and face up.' The former nsed for decorative panels and the later far important work, like pictures. The method is this: We have a tracing made of, say, a head, which tracing is pasted down on a plate of glass. The pleces of months are then, after ich careful selection and cutting, put a upon their places on the tracing fixed with when canent, and so bit

A Wedding in Synt.

On the principal street we heard musio in the distance, and coming nearer found that a wedding was in progress.

A matting was spread upon the ground. upon which the bride, a rather old and rather cross looking Nubian girl, sat. Her veil was the usual shawl, this time of white. Also upon the matting sat the musicians, two drummers playing upon a single instrument, a peculiarly long drum. A woman sat at one end of it, a man at the other, both beating together, using alternately the palm of the hand and a drumstick

To this music a number of women in. gay dresses were dancing, two at a time, taking turns in flourishing over the head of the seated bride a pule some six feet long. We stopped in the encircling crowd to see what was going on, and had stood there but two or three moments when one of the women who had been dancing suddenly threw herself headlong upon the matting, closed her eyes and seemed to go off in a kind of fit.

The other woman ran to her, fussed over her a little, and then drew back to await developments. Petitioning our dragoman to find out what this all meant, he said she had been drinking too much of the native wine, and he interpreted the woman whom he questioned about it as saying that she "have de debbil in her." In a few moments she came out of the first unconscious condition and began wildly to clutch about her. The umbrella belonging to one of our party being conveniently near she St. Gregory the great, O. S. B. seized upon it, and only with the dragoman's help was it torn away. We passed on, satisfied to assist no more in the feetavities -- Cor. New York Commercial dvarther.

Ambition sometimes leads parents to induce their children to choose a profession for which they have no capacity whatever.

In each case there is great danger that the boy's life will be a complete failure.

There are hundreds of boys who must soon make choice of their profession or trade. One of the most momentous earthly questions will be set before them.

Don't be in a hurry, boys. Weigh everything well and do not let accident cupation because it is more "genteel" than others. It is the man who gives character and dignity to his occupation, as to his clothes.

Do not think, because you were rated dull at school, that there is no honorable place for you in the world, not deal with books. God sends no man into the world without providing an occupation for him in which he may succeed and earn respect. You have yours.

But take care that you are fitted for it. The mere fact that the work seems pleasant and attractive to you does. not prove that it is fitted to your faculties. You may be ambitious, but you cannot climb a ladder without your feet and hands. Pray often to Almighty God, the Blessed Virgin and your patron saint to assist you in your choice. Learn the strength of your feet and hands, find the right ladder and then go ahead, trusting only in God and to yourself to make your own way upon it.
