Eighty-one Changes.
"This is the season," said a Detroit tailor the other day, "when the average young man concerns himself about his summer suit."

"He is anxious to blossom out in keeping with the gladness of the season. I know one shabby gent in this city who was figuring on producing the best effect with the least expenditure. How do you suppose he managed?"

"He bought three suits, one black, one blue and one white. He studied the situation out very carefully, and as he saw the wonderful possibilities of three suits a broad smile spread over his face. He tells me he is going to the seashore, and that he is going to manage like this: 'In the morning he will wear his white coat, blue vest and black trousers; noon, black coat, white vest and blue trousers; out for a stroll, blue coat, black vest, blue trousers; tennis, white coat, black vest, blue trousers; on the veranda, black coat, blue vest and white trousers, etc.'

"Now, how long do you think this young man can stay at the watering place and never commit the social desecration of appearing twice in the same outfit?"

"Give it up."
"Well, just eighty-one days. He has nine pieces in his wardrobe, and each piece is capable of nine distinct combinations or eighty-one changes in all."

"Not so bad, is it? Let our impetuous young men stick a pin where it will do the most good. With these suits of clothes a young swell can be a joy and delight to his friends for nearly three long months, a period almost coincident with the whole summer—and no two days alike!"—Detroit Free Press.

To Blow Up the Iron Gates.

A German syndicate has recently been engaged in preparing to undertake the clearing of the Danube waterway by blowing up the iron gates. By international agreement it was settled at the time of the treaty of Berlin that when the time came Serbia should give up the quarries on the banks to whatever company was charged with the work at a nominal valuation. Several hundreds of thousands of cubic meters of stone are needed in order safely to divert the course of the stream during mining and blasting operations.

Upon arriving at Belgrade, however, the German representative found that the government had anticipated him by hastily putting up all the riparian quarries to auction in numerous small lots, and knocking them down to their radical friends. Consequently the company, instead of having to deal with the crown, finds itself face to face with a swarm of individual proprietors, each of whose claims will have to be settled separately. It is believed that the strongest representations will be made to quash the recent auctions, and the company will probably be backed by most European representatives.—Cor. London Standard.

The "Honest" Georgian.

A Georgia man tumbled out of a boat in a river near his home in sight of frenzied friends and disappeared. A body was found in the stream a few weeks later which was identified as his by his family and twenty-seven acquaintances. But the life company in which he was insured felt compelled to withhold payment for a while, and was sued for the amount. Judgment would have gone against the company sure had not the "drowned" man walked into court alive and told how he had dived under the boat, hidden in the bushes on the other side, rifled a grave a few days later for a corpse which he rigged out with his own clothes and dumped into the water. But his conscience and evident pride in letting his neighbors see the size of the joke he had gotten on them were too much for his cupidity, and he gave the whole snap away.—Chicago Journal.

A Trotter's Wild Break.

A strange and exciting runaway of a horse through a Penn street business place occurred at Reading, Pa. Charles W. Bechtel owned a $500 spirited trotter, which was standing in front of his clothing house, hitched to a trotting buggy. The animal started a bicycle and dashed on the pavement. He dashed into De Witt & Hillebrand's best tobacco warehouse, a building 200 feet long. He entered by the front door while the place was crowded and made a mad break for the rear. About the middle of the building he tore loose from the vehicle, dashed an elevator shaft twenty-two feet wide and dashed through the rear door into the street below, a distance of some twenty feet. His progress was only stopped by striking a brick house on the opposite side of the street, crushing in a wall. The animal died three hours later. A recent mail from Alameda, Cal., expressed the fear that the life in the green hills of the west was being lost. The horse was killed by a man who was in the Driven Mad by Solitude.

Tillamook lighthouse, which stands on a lonely rock eighteen miles below the Columbia river on the stormy Oregon coast, was the scene last week of an exciting fight for life between four helpers and the acting keeper, who suddenly became a raving maniac. This lighthouse is notorious for its loneliness, as it covers nearly all the rock, and there is no chance when the sea is rough of reaching shore, and no opportunity at any time to take recreation. In winter the keeper is frequently a close prisoner for weeks, as the waves wash clean over the rock and lighthouse, which is over 100 feet above the sea. Two years ago rocks weighing four tons were cast up by the side of the lighthouse, the glass smashed and the foundations of the house shaken so that it had to be secured by additional iron bolts of large size.

For four years J. Saour, a very methodical German, has been the assistant keeper. Other men changed, being unable to endure the frightful monotony of life on the rocks, but he remained cheerful and contented. Recently, however, he began to indulge in fits of temper, and suddenly one day, with a scream of rage, he came dashing out of the lighthouse brandishing a large carving knife and swearing he would kill one of his helpers. The terrified man shouted for help, and his three companions responded. After a very long and desperate fight Saour was overcome. His hands and feet were bound, and he was locked in a room. Signals were then displayed, and aid was sent by the Manzanita. The maniac was taken to an insane asylum. There was no cause for insanity, except his lonely life.—Cor. St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Vice President Morton's Wigs.

There is a great deal of doubt about a number of things in this world, but it seems to be accepted as a fact in Washington that the vice president has three beautiful and complicated wigs with which he goes forth into the world to deceive mankind. The wigs are a source of profound study and earnest thought on the part of both Mr. Morton and his valet. The first wig is short, the second is of an average length and the third was made with cunning and deceptive ingenuity by a schemer. This last wig gives an absolutely triumphant illustration of hair which has been allowed to grow too long. It is said that the surest way to Mr. Morton's heart is to remind him that his hair needs cutting.

One should always be careful, however, to make this remark when the vice-president is wearing wig No. 3. After several people have told him that his hair needs cutting he alludes to it himself in a careless way, and then makes some mysterious allusion about having the barber in the morning. The following day he appears in wig No. 1, presenting the appearance of a close cropped and thoroughly well groomed statesman. These things are eagerly discussed in Washington, where the affairs of state are of no importance compared to the small talk of the day.—New York World.

For a Picnic.

The season for picnics makes us glad to know of any little delicacies which will travel well, so I hope the following will be of use: Ingredients required are one pound of cold chicken, one slice of ham and a little gelatine. Boil the chicken bones in a quart of water for five hours, add the ham, and boil till the liquor is reduced to half a pint. Let it get cold, and if the paste is not sufficiently thick add gelatine and boil again. Spread on bread that has been buttered very slightly, then add slices of chicken seasoned with salt and pepper, and put another slice of bread on top.

Lobster mold is an excellent dish. Chop up one good sized lobster, and season with mace, salt and pepper. Rub two ounces of butter into one ounce of bread crumbs, beat up three eggs, pound all the ingredients well together and boil in a buttered mold for an hour. Before being packed it should be stood upon some ice, so that it is thoroughly cold.—Julian Ralph in Chatter.

Georgia's Bible.

The old Bible, which so long has been an object familiar to visitors to the executive department, has been shipped to Savannah. It came to Atlanta from Milledgeville just after the war, with other plunder belonging to the state. Governor Gordon and all his predecessors who have assumed office during the time of the younger generation sealed the official oaths with lips laid reverently upon its cover. On the back was the name "Mathias." Not long ago Mr. T. N. Thues wrote to the executive department claiming the old book as his mother's Bible. A sister, he said, in whose possession it was, was refused to Milledgeville just before the close of the war. She was forced to leave there hurriedly on account of Sherman's arrival, and forgot to take the book away with her. Recently how it found its way to the state house is not known.—Atlanta Georgian.

Cigars for the Seaside.
The time has come for the summer resort jokes and summer resort gossip, so the following experience of a Washington druggist may be considered seasonable. He said he had been going to the seashore every summer, and had fallen into the habit of taking with him a box of the best cigars that his case in the store afforded, being a moderate smoker, with a taste for a good weed. But up to a certain time he found it difficult to obtain any enjoyment out of his costly tobacco, finding that as soon as he got near the air of the ocean the cigars began to droop and wilt, as the smoker's phrase goes, and their draught became difficult, and the process of pulling them became an altogether tedious operation.

One day he was smoking one of them with a good deal of difficulty on a chair on the beach when a gentleman sitting near accosted him, saying that he had noticed the trouble he was having with his cigars, and that they were probably of an imported brand. To this the druggist assented, and the other, pulling a couple of cigars from his pocket, handed them to the rather astonished smoker with the remark that he thought they would go better. So the druggist lit one of them, and in a minute was enjoying one of the most delightful smokes he had had since he left home. The cigar drew finely and did not wilt as the others had done.

He asked his new friend why it was, and was told that it seemed imported cigars are so affected by the salt air as to lose their shape and their drawing qualities, while cheap cigars or "two-fers," as they are called, seem to be at their best in such an atmosphere, absorbing just enough of the salt air to take on a delicious flavor. Thereafter the druggist saved money by saving nothing but cheap cigars while he was at the seashore, and every time he saw a man trying to smoke a good cigar with the same luck which he had encountered he played the "good Samaritan" and offered him a bad one, together with the advice to smoke none other within reach of the air from the sea. He also found that when he returned to town the good cigars would regain their shape and quality and were as enjoyable as ever, while the others were as detestable as he had always found them to be.—Washington Star.

No Gordon Sashes on the Exchange.

The masculine sash appears this summer to be a proper subject for discussion, as well as a popular adjunct to the toilet of gentlemen. The time has gone by when decorum demands that the waistcoat shall be worn with the thermometer marking the nineties. If one may judge from the samples displayed in the windows of the furnishing shops, the sash which is worn at the seaside and in the tennis court is unlimited as to color. But sashes of a modest hue are creeping into use in the streets of Boston, especially since Speaker Reed and Mr. Lodge popularized them upon the floor of congress.

But there is one place in Boston where the sash may not enter. One daring member of the Boston Stock Exchange ventured upon the floor with his waist enveloped in the silken adornment. He was at once and unceremoniously hustled out and warned never to appear again upon the floor of the exchange in such a guise. The congress of the United States may suffer its members to array themselves in such a manner, but the Boston Stock Exchange, never!—Boston Advertiser.

The Siberian University.

The medical faculty of the new university of Tomsk (western Siberia) is being rapidly organized. Eight chairs have recently been filled up, Professor Albitskiy having been appointed to that of general pathology, Professor Winoogradov to that of pathological anatomy, Professor Soudakow to that of hygiene, Professors Kuslow and Kortunov to those of special pathology and therapeutics and internal medicine, and Professor Rogowitch and Dr. Salistchew to that of surgery. The chair of pharmacology, which was offered to Dr. Fawlow, is still vacant, owing to that gentleman having accepted a similar appointment at Warsaw. The erection of the various clinics is being proceeded with, and it is hoped they will be ready for the reception of patients about the beginning of next year.—Chicago Herald.

A Bit of Advice from an Old Fisherman.
Get to a drug store as soon as you can, and buy two ounces of the best olive oil mixed with one ounce of lime water, and a drop or two of rose water just to scent it. Then rub it on your burned face, and it will take all the inflammation out in next to no time.—Exchange.

It is estimated that nearly 200,000 persons visit the White mountains annually, and the income from the mountain houses is about $5,000,000, of which $1,000,000 is clear profit.
