Summer Rain.
Fall gently, silent summer rain,
And kiss moist tipped drooping flowers,
Revive their sun dried bells again
And bless with life a few more hours.
Sustent gently, gracious gift of God,
In fiery hearts a thirst for dew,
Lie fragrant on the panting sod
And all its verdant blades renew.
Flow over all the buds that sleep
In green leaves nestling, let them feel
Thy vivifying influence creep,
And every scented bud unseal.
Steal downward where the rich seed lies
In darkness folded; give it might
To spread its arm like leaves and rise
Strong in its new found life and light.

How the Goldenrod Blooms.
The Listener, in one or two trips which he has made this summer up into the mountains, and into Maine as far as Augusta, has noticed a phenomenon which has now become quite familiar to him, but which a good many other people to whom he has spoken on the matter have failed to notice; namely, that the period of blooming of the goldenrod does not begin first in the south and move northward, but apparently in the other direction, from north to south. In some places in northern Vermont and New Hampshire no goldenrod of the common field and railroad track variety was in profuse bloom by the 10th of July. On the Kennebec river the other day the goldenrod was much more golden and less tinged with green still than is in Malden or Cambridge. And the place where the plant is latest of all in yellowing, apparently, is Cape Cod, where the dwarf seaside variety, most common there, hardly begins to do itself justice before September. It is possible that the northern goldenrod ripens before that farther south for the same reason that Indian corn ripens earlier in Vermont than it does in Virginia—it has got to ripen earlier if it is going to ripen at all.—Boston Transcript.

Collegiate Waiters at Chautauqua.
There are many boarding houses. Indeed, nearly every structure which isn't a school is a boarding house. And there are dormitories over the various educational halls. The only hotel is the Athenaeum. It is a big white, veranda circled, balconied, pillared structure, overlooking the lake, notably clean, roomy and comfortable.
My waiter, who is a college boy—so are most of the waiters here—asked how long I purposed remaining, and on hearing my plans for departure said pityingly: "Ah! that is truly unfortunate. One does not become imbued with the spirit of Chautauqua in so short a time. It is necessary to remain at least for one season."
I clutched at a stalk of celery to steady myself, and gazed at the calm young gentleman who was changing my plate. I beheld a six foot athlete, who wore several society badges, whose manners were irreproachable, and who passed the bread with the benign air of a college president distributing sheepskins to graduates.—Chautauqua Cor. New York World.

The Largest Girder Ever Made.
The Keystone Bridge Company, of Pittsburgh, Pa., has just completed a girder for the new city hall of San Francisco which is the largest ever made in the United States, so far as the firm knows. It is 105 feet long and weighs 70 tons. A contract for two girders was given the company last November, and they have been working on it ever since. The materials for the second one are now being prepared. The girders are intended for the ground floor of the building. The great problem now is to transport it to the Pacific coast. The Chicago and Northwestern and Union Pacific roads have undertaken the job. The long monster is loaded on three of the largest freight cars obtainable.—New York Telegram.

Watermelon Waste.
Albeit to the unpracticed eye of the stranger a melon patch seems literally covered with the tempting fruit, when it comes to be gathered experience demonstrates that the merchantable portion dwindles into comparative insignificance. Thus, when subjected to the standard required by the trade—to wit, eighteen pounds apiece—it is found that the average yield of marketable melons is only three melons to two vines. The vast remainder, says a few of the larger ones, which may find a sale at some price in the home markets, is left to rot in the fields. Hogs and cattle will eat them, but do not, it is said, appear to derive any nutriment from them.—Savannah

A Cheap Summer Outing.
The big bridge is the coolest place in the two cities upon a hot night, yet very few persons cross it on the promenade after midnight. Those who do have a delightful walk, and one that is bound to provoke sleep. Several months ago a Brooklyn school teacher had a very obstinate attack of insomnia, which would not yield to drugs or the mental exercises suggested for the relief of the disease. A newspaper man advised her to take bridge at night in moderate doses. For six weeks she spent an hour on the bridge each night before going to bed. She attracted the attention of the police before she got through, but she conquered the insomnia, and it has not returned.
It is not an unusual sight to see well dressed men nodding or sound asleep on the seats around the towers or along the promenade at 2 or 3 o'clock in the morning. The police do not seem to disturb them, and a nap up there is said to be one of the most refreshing things in the world. An entire family strolled across the bridge from Brooklyn and back again between 3 and 4 o'clock the other morning. The father carried a babe in his arms and two children walked with the mother. They were all neatly dressed, and looked as if they had come out of hot sleeping rooms to get a breath of fresh pure air.—New York Times.

Cooking Eggs on Hot Sidewalks.
Two treasury clerks were looking out of a window of the north front of the building in Washington upon the smooth pavement that, unprotected from the sun, becomes hot enough to almost blister your feet through the soles of your shoes.
"That pavement is hot enough to fry eggs," said one clerk.
"Bosh," said the other.
"I bet you that it is."
A few minutes later, when lunch hour arrived, the two men stood out on the pavement, where the temperature overhead was about 105. One of them had an egg in his hand. Holding it close to the pavement he clipped it open with a knife, and let the contents fall upon the heated flagstone. There was a little sizzle, and the albumen began to grow white and hard.
"What did I tell you?" said the triumphant clerk, and then the two men went and cooled themselves.—Washington Letter.

A Fortune in Litigation.
Jean Thiery, a rich merchant and ship owner in the Rhine provinces, died in 1676, leaving a fortune of 50,000 Louis d'or in Paris and 800,000 thalers in the Venice mint. His heirs for some unknown reason did not draw the money from the depository in Venice, so at the end of the last century Napoleon found it still untouched and appropriated it to the use of his army. For the last thirty years the descendants of Thiery have been trying to find a way of recovering the 800,000 thalers with interest. Recently they all met in Cologne, and resolved to send their lawyers to Paris to move the French government to pay over an indemnity. It was said that the French chambers had already considered their claims and advised the government to pay them.—Paris Letter.

An Author Who Prefers Trousers.
Mme. Dénolafo, the well known Persian archaeologist, who has just brought out a novel of the time of Darius II, has become so accustomed to the greater convenience of masculine attire in her journeyings and excavations with her husband that she seldom abandons it, and even in Paris rides her horse like a man. Her ability is so great that she is pardoned her eccentricities with commendable graciousness.—Harper's Bazar.

A Fair Sympathizer.
Miss Brownbeane (of Boston)—Dreadfully warm, Mr. Phortpitte! Is it so in your city?
Mr. Phortpitte—It is. Very hot and fearfully dry. Vegetation simply burning up.
Miss B. (earnestly)—So very sorry! That will be very bad for the steel and glass plants that grow in Pittsburgh.—Pittsburg Bulletin.

The schooner Mary Anderson has sailed from San Francisco in the hope of finding the $2,000,000 lost years ago when the Brother Jonathan went down with all on board. Nobody knows where the vessel sunk, but a skipper of the Pacific thinks the good luck which follows the name of Mary Anderson may locate the lost treasure.

John Bull and His Gun.
Secretary Proctor has received a present of a new Enfield rifle from the English government as a sample of the style of arm now in use in the British service. It is handsomely incased in a polished wooden box, with silver plates and corners, and lined with blue velvet. It is of the latest magazine pattern, thirty caliber, and weighs about ten pounds. The action is exceedingly strong and positive, the breech mechanism being thoroughly automatic. The magazine is a sheet iron case half an inch thick and about four inches square, fitting to the under side of the lock.

A gate shuts it off at the will of the operator, so that the gun can be used either as magazine or a single firing arm. It is provided with a novelty in the way of a long range sight designed to cover distances from 1,800 to 3,500 yards, but the ordinary sight is not considered as fine as that in use on the American Springfield rifle. The cartridges are shaped somewhat after the design of the famous Label cartridge, the leaden ball being encased in a thin steel sheet for the purpose of preventing the distortion of the bullet.—Washington Star.

The Heir to Fabulous Wealth.
Baron E. de Rothschild, of Paris, is the only son of Baron Alphonse de Rothschild, head of the Parisian branch of the great bankers. He is tall, blond, fine looking and about 23 years of age. Having finished his university course he is spending a few years in travel. For the past five months he has been seeing America.—Washington Post.

A Queen's Body Pickled.
The body of the Queen of Corea, who died June 4, is still kept in brine, the process of embalming being unknown to the people of that far off land. The body will be kept four or five months, according to the custom of the country, and then interred with much pomp and ceremony.—Exchange.

Gen. Hastings, of Pennsylvania, who is spoken of for director general of the World's fair, is said to be a noble specimen of manhood—tall, broad shouldered and deep chested. He first became known in political life by his speech nominating Sherman at the Chicago convention.

M. Constans has refused to allow a real Spanish bull fight to be held at a fete in aid of the Martinique sufferers. The Italian authorities have less good feeling, for the next corrida (the fifth), to be held at Naples, is under the special patronage of a benevolent society.

One Way to Court Accidents.
I saw an odd sight yesterday. A small row boat was floating down the East river just below Hell Gate, and in it was a German family, consisting of the head of the household, his wife, his sister and four children, ranging all the way from seventeen to six. They all had on their bathing suits, and were jumping off the boat and scrambling back again with the greatest glee. It was a wonder to me that they were not all drowned, for not one of them could swim over two hundred yards at most, and the tide was running fully five miles an hour, carrying them and the boat along together, but they spluttered and splashed around in the water, and seemed to enjoy it immensely.—New York Star.

A Thrifty and Crafty Duke.
The Duke of Edinburgh (thrifty soul) went all the way from London to Edinburgh last spring to open the exhibition, and after his return he sent in a bill of expenses for the exhibition people to pay. Among other items was a charge of $1,000 for a special train, whereupon it was remonstrated that the duke did not travel in a special train. "That's true," said the duke, "but I was entitled to one, and even if I didn't take it you should be willing to pay me the cost of one." Well, now, maybe the frugal Scotchmen who are running that exhibition aren't just too mad for any use.—Cor. Chicago News.

A Popular Aristocratic Club.
According to the latest club book of the Union club the waiting list numbers nearly 350, and less than forty vacancies occurred within the past year. The limit of 1,200 was reached during that period, and the waiting list was reduced by about eighty. If vacancies continue to occur at the average of the past two years it will take exactly nine years to elect the present waiting list, unless some die off or get tired of standing in line.—New York Sun.

Miss Margaret Harkness, who is now studying the labor movement on the continent, will soon visit Olive Schreiner at the Cape. Miss Harkness hopes to go on to the diamond fields, following the example of Miss Schreiner, who spent a year at the gold diggings. Her new book, "The Laborer," will ap-
