

Monstrous Power of Sea Breakers.
From experiments made last month at All Rock and Skerryvore lighthouses, on the coast of Scotland, it was found that the force of the breakers on the side of the German ocean may be taken at about a ton and a half to every square foot of exposed surface, the Atlantic side throws breakers with double that force, three tons to the square foot, thus a force of only two square yards sustains blow from a heavy Atlantic breaker equal to fifty-four tons.

In March of this year a heavy gale blew for three days and nights at Skerryvore, washing out blocks of limestone and granite of three and five tons weight as easily as if they had been empty egg shells, in some cases throwing them entirely over the breakwater at Plymouth. Over 800 tons of such blocks were washed 300 feet up the inclined beach after being thrown over the breakwater and scattered about in various directions.

One block of limestone, estimated to be of fifteen tons weight, was moved over 150 feet from its place in the surf where it had been firmly grounded since 1697, it having first been rolled in sight by the awful gale of the "Windy Christ-mas" of that year. This is quite a new sea record for 1890, showing that the gale of March 8 was the worst known on the Scottish coast for 193 years.—Chicago Times.

Black Hills Tin Mine.
Joseph Hare, editor of The In Miner, of Hill City, S. D., in speaking of the tin mines at that place, says: "Hill City is situated exactly in the center of a tin belt, which is in the shape of a half moon, and is about thirty miles in length and three miles wide. We are twenty-eight miles from Rapid City, the nearest railroad point.

"The richness of these mines is simply wonderful, and one who has not been there can hardly believe it, but I state as fact when I tell you that there is enough tin on the dumps and in sight now to supply the United States for five years. As soon as the big mill is started at Hill City we shall then be able to ship the tin out in bars. Some of these mines have been pushed down 240 feet, and the deeper the richer.

"The vein is eight feet thick and dips toward the east at an angle of about 45 degs. Some of the mines average 27 1/2 per cent. of metallic tin, and the whole ledge averages 10 per cent. The capitalists interested are mostly New York and English men. The larger part of the capital is furnished by New York men."

A Kite Story.
Some fishermen engaged in Belfast lough recently picked up a very large seagull which was seen approaching the boat with wings outspread, floating on the water, but quite dead. The men were puzzled to account for the progress it made through the water, as it went faster than the boat; but as it came near it was found that, wound securely round the body and under the wings, was a string or cordage, which on closer examination they discovered was attached to a large paper kite then flying above them at a considerable height. The kite furnished the propelling power. The bird had evidently, while flying at Belfast, got entangled in the string of a boy's kite, had been unable to extricate itself, and taking to the sea had been drowned in its efforts to obtain freedom.—Exchange.

A New Refuge for Paris.
By the death of M. Pruvot, a landed proprietor, who lived in the Boulevard de Courcelles, and left behind him a fortune of $30,000, the city of Paris has received a legacy of nearly $40,000. The testator left instructions that the chief portion of this amount is to be used for the construction and maintenance of a "Night Shelter for the Homeless and Destitute Poor in the Seventeenth Arrondissement," which includes the districts of the Ternes, the Plaine-Monceau, the Batignolles and the Epinettes. He has also left a considerable sum for benevolent purposes among the young to the town of Solesmes, where he had a residence.—London Telegraph.

Fatal Struggle with a Tiger.
Details are given in the Indian papers of the painful death of Mr. Howard, of the Norfolk regiment, from injuries received in a struggle with a tiger. Mr. Howard was out shooting near Malapuram, on the west coast, when he suddenly came upon a tiger. He fired and wounded the animal, which fled into the jungle. Mr. Howard an hour later came across the tiger in the open. The animal charged at him, and Mr. Howard in firing missed. Two natives ran away. Though a third remained and was successful in shooting the tiger, he did not succeed in time to prevent it from seizing and inflicting serious injuries on Mr. Howard. From these he was at first expected to recover, but he died suddenly, to the great regret of his regiment, one morning shortly after his exciting struggle.—London News.

Across Florida by Water.
A Cook, of the Diston dredge, which is cutting a canal from Hart to the Econlockhatchie, expects to complete the canal by Jan. 1, and then a boat may be taken by inland water from the mouth of the St. Johns to the mouth of the Caloosahatchie.—Cor. Sa.

The world's stock of diamonds has increased enormously in the last fifteen years. In 1870 the output of the African mines was about 1,500,000 carats, and in 1889 it was over 4,000,000, and the output of the mines which controls all the principal sources of diamonds at the present time is estimated at 10,000,000 carats.

Price of Peanuts Going Up.
Hard days are coming for those who love to crack and munch the savory peanut, and the small boy especially can prepare for misery, for the price of the peanut is moving skyward. The high price is due, it is said, to the short crops of last year and the year before. The best grade of Virginia hand picked peanuts is now selling at nine and a half cents a pound, and it is stated by dealers that soon the price will be ten cents a pound. The peanuts coming to this market are mostly from Virginia. The Virginia nut is medium sized, with a well-defined and pleasant flavor. The North Carolina nuts are smaller than the Virginia, but have about the same kind of inside shell.—New York Times.

Pater—My son, beware of young Blinks. He's a spendthrift, and plays fast and loose with his cash.
Son—Never knew that of him, and I don't think you can prove your statement.

Pater—I can. I saw him buying for a lady in his company three pears and a peach, with the air of one who was doing an ordinary act.—Pittsburg Bulletin.

Big Mosquitoes in New York Suburbs.
Policeman John H. Mullen, of the Tremont station, was accused of having been off post and lying in a field. He admitted that he was in the field, and excused his conduct by saying that mosquitoes up that way were as big as butterflies, and he had lain down with his face in the sod to avoid them.—New York Sun.

The Chewing Gum Habit.
A prominent New York physician told me a few days ago that the constant chewing of gum has produced weak minds in fourteen cases of young girls now under treatment, the constant movement of the mouth causing too great a strain on the head.—Ladies' Home Journal.

Last year the internal revenue from cigarettes was over $1,000,000. The increase over the year before was $145,000. At this indicates the increase of the consumption of the deadly article. During the year boys and young men consumed 2,350,000,000 of these little paper rolls of poison. There are multitudes of boys, not yet grown, who smoke from twenty to sixty a day.

Don't.
Do not take crackers on a picnic. They are conveniently handled, but are very apt to provoke thirst and fill up the stomach in an unsatisfactory way. It is scarcely necessary to add a caution against indulging in peanuts or candies on a picnic. Sponge cake and mint drops are recommended if the picknickers crave something sweet. The boxes of "square" Chong ginger or the long, crystallized "thumb" are dainties particularly acceptable in hot weather, and not likely to upset the digestion. If the party is large it is an arrange for the transportation of a block of ice, wrapped first in newspaper and with an outer covering of flannel.—Philadelphia Ledger.

Boys Capture a Thief.
A desperate horse thief in Maine, who escaped from jail, has been captured by boys. Discovering him they gave chase and cornered him in a deserted house, where one of the lads drew a toy pistol and fired several blank cartridges at him. The fellow then gave himself up. A carriage was obtained, and he was returned to jail by the triumphant youngsters.—Philadelphia Ledger.

A Daring Photographer.
A daring feat in photography was performed last week by George H. Ball, of Boston. He succeeded in getting a fine negative of a blast of a ledge near Savin Hill, one of the largest on record, in which 250 pounds of dynamite were used. He did it at the risk of being crushed by some huge rock, and moved himself and camera out of the way just as a boulder several tons in weight was about to land dangerously near him. The picture was taken just as the dust and stones had reached their highest elevation, and is as interesting as it is rare.—Boston Letter.

Manuscript Kept Ten Years.
Ten years ago, the late H. W. Richardson, of The Portland Advertiser, wrote an article on "The Metric System" for Harper's Magazine. It is printed this month. This is a neighborly illustration of the enormous pressure on the pages of our great periodicals, and the small chance of an author's getting into them unless he has first made a great reputation. Harper's would not wait ten years to publish an article by Tolstoi or Stockton.—Lexington Journal.
