Administrator of the exarchate —which includes some 300,000 Catholics of the Greek Rite from Yugoslavia, Czechoslovakia and Hungary—is Msgr. Nicholas Elko, Vicar General. Bishop Ivancho, who was named Titular Bishop of Europus and Coadjutor of the Greek Rite Diocese in 1946, succeeded as Exarch in 1948. He has been suffering from serious heart trouble for about a year.

300 Year Old Relics Found Near Cape Vincent By Rochester Industrialist

While repairing Dablon Point near Cape Vincent, for a celebration to be held in the summer of 1956, Herman G. Hetzler, of 28 Lake View Park, Rochester industrialist, who has bulldozers working at the site, found two relics believed to be of French origin.

The relics are believed to have been used by members of the Rev. Claude Dablon's party when they made their historic overnight stop in 1656 at Dablon Point, second point to the west beyond Tibbett's Point and about three miles from Cape Vincent.

When unearthed by the bulldozers the relics were well under the tree stump and according to Hetzler are believed to be in the neighborhood of 300 years old.

Hetzler, according to the Watertown Daily Times, has been instrumental in setting up many missionary memorials. He had set up a bronze tablet in a 1,500 pound boulder surmounted by a high wooden cross on land donated by Matthew Long in September, 1939.

ONE OF THE relics is identified as a hand forged article shaped similar to a spade. One museum curator has reported that this type of article was used by the French, around Montreal, for removing baked goods from the large baking ovens they used there. This idea would seem plausible, as Father Dablon had started out from Montreal and was on a journey back after a winter as missionary to the Indians when he made his landing at what is now Dablon Point.

The relic is approximately 30 inches in length and seven inches in width, entirely hand hammered and forged, and is reported to be still in very good condition. It is said to be as sturdy in comparison as modern articles.

ALSO FOUND was a gun barrel believed to be of the 16th century type. There is nothing left of the stock of the gun, but it is thought that it must have been made either in Montreal or France. The history behind Dablon Point and the spot where the relics were found dates back to 1655 when Father Dablon, a Jesuit priest, left Montreal for Iroquois country.

His party traveled up the St. Lawrence River, through the Thousand Islands and the area which became Clayton and then by way of French Creek and the Chaumont River to Lake Ontario, and the Salmon River.

After spending the winter among the Onondaga Indians, it was decided to return to Montreal. Accompanied by 24 Christian Indians, Father Dablon and his party were forced to spend the night at the place now known as Dablon Point.

A MOVEMENT was started in 1939 to have the name Dablon Point officially approved. The movement was headed by Matthew Long, the name previously being Stony Point. The movement reached fulfillment in 1940 when the name was officially recognized as Dablon Point.

On July 15, 1944, at a Solemn High Mass the official dedication of the Memorial Chapel of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart took place at the site where Hetzler had previously donated the bronze tablet and wooden cross.

THE CHAPEL was also provided and equipped through Hetzler's generosity. This chapel serves as a religious and educational summer institution for students of St. Joseph College of Watertown and Quebec.

Hetzler's newest project at Dablon Point will be held in the summer of 1956, the 300 year anniversary of the landing of Father Dablon and the 24 Christian Onondaga and Oneida Indians. At this time Hetzler is planning to have a celebration depicting the actual landing of Father Dablon and his party at the end of Dablon Road.

Even now the way is being prepared by Hetzler who is having the site cleared in spots. It was during the execution of these preparations that the two relics were found.

FIGHTER OF POLIO

Former Rochesterian Honored In Florida

Miss Helen Voss, a former Rochesterian and a graduate of St. Mary Hospital School of Nursing, here, has been cited as "Woman of the Week" in The Independent, St. Petersburg, Fla. newspaper.

A determined fighter of polio, she is the sister of Mrs. Mary Voss Ainsworth, a staff member of the Catholic Courier-Journal. For more than nine years she has worked in St. Petersburg, and prior to that she was employed at hospitals in New York and California. She attends St. Jude's Church in St. Petersburg.

"Nursing polio cases takes a lot of know-how and hard work," she says, "but when you've pulled somebody through something like that, it gives you a sense of satisfaction like nothing else I know. I guess that's one reason I love the work so much."

MANY TIMES Miss Voss has worked a double shift when her services were needed. Besides her care of polio patients, she is actively engaged in Polio Fund drives and serves as president of the District Nurses Association and head of the Leonardy Parliamentarians.

She was recently elected secretary of the state Private Duty Nurse section and three-year board member of the Florida State Nurses Association. The article in The Independent said in part:

"A good-natured woman, who punctuates her conversation with a flashing grin, Miss Voss operates on the theory that no matter how bad things are, they could always be worse and thus forever finds reasons to be optimistic.

"It is not difficult to believe that her deep merry laugh has been better than a dose of medicine for her former patients, who range in age from one year to 39.

"Miss Voss lives alone but laughs at the idea of being lonely. Her life is much too busy. Despite her crowded schedule, she still finds time for gardening, cooking and occasionally baking cookies for her sister nurses.

"But her major drive in life is doing what she can for the world of the sick and the suffering. And she does this not only through her energy and skill but also through her vivid optimism."

AF Cites Gain In Chapel Attendance

Chapel attendance among Air Force members and their families is on the increase, according to a statement released by Maj. Charles F. Scheuerman of the Rochester Air Force Reserve.

Figures for fiscal year 1954 show an attendance of more than 10,000,000 at base chapels, which is nearly 300,000 over the previous year. These figures do not include the thousands of airmen and their families who participate in church affairs in local communities.

Headed by Maj. Gen. Charles I. Carpenter, Chief of Air Force Chaplains, there are approximately 1,000 chaplains on active duty with the Air Force.

"It is with some amount of justifiale pride," the Major said, "that we consider these statistics, and the suggestion also comes to mind that the military service which demonstrates this sort of religious practice cannot be very far from the path of truth and righteousness, and is deserving of the respect of all peoples and nations."

Argentine Police Ban Procession

Buenos Aires — (RNS) — Police at La Rioja prohibited the traditional Roman Catholic New Year's Day procession in that northern city.

The official announcement cited "security reasons" for the ban. The parade features a statue of St. Nicholas of Bari, patron saint of La Rioja.

Police said open-air religious processions were barred throughout Argentina. They added that religious meetings inside churches would be permitted and given full protection.

EARLIER IN the Peronist campaign against the Church, a series of outdoor meetings was banned in Buenos Aires. Police here refused to allow an outdoor Mass marking the end of the Marian Year last month, but a crowd estimated at more than 100,000 gathered in the downtown Plaza de Mayo and heard on loudspeakers a service conducted inside the cathedral.

Parishioners Warned On Red Union

Moline, Ill. —(NC)—Calling the issue a moral one, pastors in the quad-cities area have urged parishioners working in the International Harvester Company's Farmall Works not to vote for the farm equipment branch of the United Electrical Workers Union to represent them in collective bargaining.

"We believe the UE-FE Union is communist dominated," said one pastor. "We are simply reminding Catholics that they cannot vote for, or support in any other way, in good conscience, any organization that is communist dominated."

The pastor added that "the issue is very clear. If this were a political issue, it would be very different. But it isn't. This is a moral issue."

In an announcement at all Masses, the pastors urged the workers to vote instead for the CIO United Auto Workers in the election. The National Labor Relations Board conducted the balloting.

Millions Paid On Religious War Claims

Washington, D. C. — (NC) — Over $11 million has been paid by the United States War Claims Commission on 75 allowed religious claims in the United States and the Philippines as the result of World War II hardships.

This was shown in the tenth and final semi-annual report of the Commission. The report also gave a figure of $141,680,253.02 as the total amount paid out for war hardships to refugees, prisoners and religious organizations.

The exact amount paid for religious claims was $11,444,443.24. It was distributed in two types of payments: Claims for service and relief to American citizens or members of the Armed Forces, and claims for loss and damage to property or facilities connected with educational, medical or welfare work.

FORTY-SEVEN relief claims were granted for a total payment of $1,868,937.64. Twenty-eight property claims were granted for payments amounting to $9,575,515.60.

This was the final report of the War Claims Commission. The agency was abolished last June 30 and replaced by the Foreign Claims Settlement Commission which prepared this report covering the WCC's last three months of operation.
