Attend Daily Mass

Marquette Unit Offers Laity Mission Work

In September 1952 Mary Coll and Kathleen Slater, two Pittsburgh sisters offered to donate two months' work to the American Indian missions. They had read of the Marquette League for Catholic Indian Missions activities in the field but were not in a position to contribute any large sum to the League.

Kathleen Slater

When Monsignor Cullen, director of the League, established the Lay Apostolate for Indian missions, he felt that it would give much needed assistance to the missionaries and at the same time afford the laity an opportunity to take an active part in carrying out Our Lord's command to bring His Word to "all nations."

He hoped, furthermore, young men and women through living and working in a religious institution might discover that they had a religious vocation.

Last September, Kathleen Slater, the League's pioneer Lay Apostolate member, became a postulant in the Sisters of the Blessed Sacrament, the community devoted to missionary work among American Indians and Negroes. On March 2 she will receive her habit. The Marquette League Lay Apostolate (299 Fourth Avenue, New York 10, N.Y.) has developed four vocations and sent some 50 volunteers to missions on Indian reservations. Teachers, cooks, clerical workers, matrons, handymen, prefects, farm hands are needed. There is no training period and you may volunteer for two months or a lifetime.

Pontiff Misses Pius XI Mass
