DOINGS AT THE DALY'S

Power-Houses Of Prayer

By Mary Tinley Daly

"What do you do when you're too befogged to pray?" was one of the questions turned in during the question-and-answer portion of a recent retreat.

Mary Daly

The retreat master slowly smoothed out the paper, crumpled by the distraught questioner. His eyes were compassionate as he looked out on the assembled group. Somebody, perhaps many somebodies, needed guidance.

"Often it is hard to pray," he answered softly. "Even we, who have ben schooled in prayer, when a crisis comes into our lives feel that no matter how hard we try, we can't pray as intensively as we feel is necessary. . ."

A woman in the third row — possibly the questioner —spoke up: "It's an awful feeling, Father. You kneel down, knowing that this is the time of all times when you must pray, and you begin, 'Our Father' — thinking of the Fatherhood of God. You begin again, 'Our Father, Who art in Heaven', realizing that this is a problem of terrific significance. . ."

"I know," the priest said. "Perhaps others here have had such moments?"

A sense of subconscious agreement pervaded the room, and another person took up: "After awhile you abandon the conventional form of prayer and try to make up your own words, but your mind runs around in circles. You want to pray but you can't. What then, Father?"

"Then," the retreat master said, "you turn your problem over completely to the will of God. You pray as well as you are able . . . But this is the time to call on the 'power-house of prayer,'"

POWER-HOUSE OF prayer? This was a new one to most of the retreatments.

"I mean the contemplative orders of the Church," the priest said. "Did you ever stop to think of the really vital role our contemplatives play in the eternal scheme of things? Those devoted men and women, in their monasteries and convents, have dedicated their lives completely — and I do mean completely — to prayer. It isn't only prayer for their individual salvation, it's for all the world, for certain segments at one time or another—for all in need."

There was total silence in the little room for a few moments. "You mean we could ask them to help us pray?" someone asked.

"That's right," the priest nodded. "They pray around-the-clock — don't even think of a clock, as a matter of fact. They have entirely renounced the world, as we know it, and are waiting to help any of us when, as this questioner put it, we're 'too befogged to pray'."

"But in our town," one of the women said, "there isn't a single monastery of contemplatives, nor any such convent. What do we do when we 'get befogged'?"

"You go, by personal approach or by letter, to a gathering of contemplatives," the priest advised. "For instance, there's the Carmel of Our Lady at Terre Haute, Indiana. This is one of the 'power-houses of prayer' we've been talking about — and yours for the asking."

MANY MAKING that retreat had never thought beyond their own prayers and those they could ask from friends, relatives and parish priests. Few had envisaged the strength of the contemplatives' efforts.

In many towns and cities there are monasteries and convents where one can go to request that the monks or sisters add their prayers to ours.

Other areas have no contemplatives nearby. This does not mean that those who live in such places are shut off from the intensive prayers of the dedicated who devote their lives to prayer. A letter, a phone call, and your cause is taken up -- always, of course, if it be God's will.

The Carmel at Terre Haute is only one such "power-house" — but a very telling one. The nuns there, as in any contemplative order, are always ready to add their prayers to yours, whether or not you are "too befogged to pray."

Newsman's TV Play Set For Kraft Hour

New York — (NC) — Bob Crean, former staff writer for the N.C.W.C. News Service, will have his first play "Anna Santonello," produced by the Kraft Television Theater over the NBC-TV network, August 8, from 9 to 10 p.m., viewed on WHAM-TV in the Rochester area.

Crean, who writes a bi-weekly television review column for the the Archdiocese of Washington, D.C., is a graduate of the Speech and Drama Department of the Catholic University of America. He now writes scripts for comedian Peter Lind Hayes.

Need Seen For 'Saints' In Our Streets

In Rochester, a city of great industry, rapid growth and development with a large and ever increasing population and with a demand for more and more new street names, isn't it time we had some "saints" in our streets!

Rochester's city hall records show that many years ago one of our principal streets was the subject of a "naming" controversy. Officials decided finally to call the new thoroughfare after one of the two churches then flourishing on the street.

The recently razed Spiritualist Church, at that time the Plymouth Baptist, won out and what might very well have been Immaculate Conception Way was named Plymouth Avenue.

New housing tracts are constantly opening up in and around the city of Rochester to make way for a growing population. Realtors have many headaches in building the type of home that will appeal to the particular wage-earner.

They must assure nearness to shopping centers, churches and schools, then construct and landscape to please the eye and pocketbook, and finally find a buyer.

ONE OF THE last duties of the tract owner is to "christen" his new street and register the name at city hall.

Everything from Smith to Eldorado, the common to the bizarre, can be found in the names of Rochester streets. Fruits, trees, birds, congressmen, foreign capitals and pagan gods are perpetuated like a litany — but hardly a saint in the bunch!

It is not an uncommon sight in Europe to see a street sign that reads "Street of the Holy Angels," "Way of the Madonna," or "Avenue of the Good Shepherd."

Rightfully, it is felt if the street is blessed and given the name of a saint or a title of the Blessed Virgin, a special protection will be given to those who live there and travel through it.

WITHIN THE city limits of Rochester, only six streets are named "saint": St. Clair Street, St. Jacob Street, St. James Street, St. Paul Street, St. Casimir Street and St. Stanislaus Street, and most of these are actually family names of original property owners.

The city of Detroit recently named one of its busy street intersections "Cardinal Wyszynski Corner" honoring the "dry martyr" who is still suffering under Red persecution.

England has its famous "Paternoster Row" in London.

St. Francis, St. Joan of Arc, are saints whose lives appeal to everyone regardless of creed. Early Christian heroes such as St. Lawrence, St. Stephen or the holy apostles are also names names that should be perpetuated in our official civic life.

Named for a Holy Redeemer parishioner.

Family name of early city resident.

Called after St. Stanislaus Church, Hudson Ave.

In honor of Red-held Polish cardinal.
