Clergy chant Litany of Saints as Bishop Kearney blesses new St. Thomas More Church, Brighton.

New Brighton Church Blessed

In the crisp cool evening air of All Saints Day, Bishop Kearney stood at the entrance to East Avenue's new St. Thomas More Church, Brighton.

With simple, age-old rites he dedicated the startingly modern church to divine service.

The new church, a stone's throw from St. John Fisher College, links two medieval saints, one a prelate, the other a layman, who were partners in martyrdom under King Henry VIII of England.

BISHOP KEARNEY, in his sermon, said he attended the 1935 canonization rite in Rome for the two saints but the suspicion that he would one day dedicate a college to one and a church to the other.

He said the contemporary design of the new church showed the Catholic faith was "up to date in every century but kept true to the essential Christian doctrines and moral code which are changeless."

The Bishop told the capacity-filled church that nothing made regarding those who miss any con-
