Diocesan Tourney

Six Squads Set For Cage Tilts

By TOM EMMANUEL

Six well balanced Catholic High Schools in the Rochester Diocese will take part in the second annual basketball tournament, which gets underway, Feb. 28, with St. Anthony Padua of Watkins Glen and Mt. Carmel of Auburn opening the program in the initial round of activity.

The Padua-Mt. Carmel contest will be played on the latter's court. On Thursday, March 3, Notre Dame of Elmira will travel to Geneva to engage the DeSales quint.

The two winners are scheduled to meet Friday, March 4, in the semifinal round, with the victor to face the McQuaid-Aquinas winner at Rochester Institute of Technology's Clark gym Sunday, March 6. The big Rochester game of interest will be the Aquinas-McQuaid game at the Community War Memorial Saturday, March 5.

CHECKING INTO comparative records of the teams, Aquinas, last year's victor, appears to have the best record standing at 13-3. The three losses came at the hands of two Buffalo teams, Canisius and Bishop Timon twice.

Ronnie Mack, Aquinas coach, taking over where Louis Basile left off last year, has done well with his team, in his first year at the helm. Aquinas has beaten Donald F. Bucci's Mt. Carmel club twice this year.

THE ONLY other club to take two decisions over Mt. Carmel has been Edward H. Rothwell's Notre Dame team from Elmira. McQuaid split with Mt. Carmel, with George Monagan's team taking the return meeting in Rochester two week's ago.

At this point very little can be safely predicted about Joseph Lemak's Padua team, but information and records for the season will be forthcoming next week.

Robert J. Maher, former Brockport State athlete, now in his third year at Geneva, has come up with one of the best DeSales clubs in many seasons, and has it the upper half of the Finger Lakes Conference. At the present time it appears that Maher's club will be the strongest representative to face the McQuaid-Aquinas victor three week's hence.

Tickets for the Rochester War Memorial game Saturday, March 5, have gone on sale, at the two schools, Aquinas and McQuaid and at the War Memorial. Last year's game was a sell out, and this year's contest should duplicate the interest manifested in the two team's initial meeting last season.
