There Goes The Bride!

By LOUISE WILSON

(Louise Wilson is heard daily, Monday through Friday, on "Woman's World" at 10:05 a.m. on Radio Station WHAM.)

Soon after the strains of the wedding march have drifted away, the bride and her groom leave on the honeymoon. Smart modern brides travel in leather coats for elegance and comfort. The bride pictured (at right), left behind her long white wedding gown when she slipped on the full-length coat of washable tulip yellow leather accessorized with slim, smooth-leather handbag and black kid shorty gloves.

Her black suede pumps double in leather for her going-away outfit and for late day cocktail clothes. Smart luggage in scuff proof leather are ideal traveling companions for the new bride and groom.

Fashions change just as the customs themselves do. Bewildered bridegrooms may take some comfort from the fact that marriage customs around the world are among the strangest of man's doing.

MAY THIS CUSTOM never become popular in America — but in one Ethiopian tribe, the wedding ceremony consists of the bridegroom dropping his bride in a tub of water. Another custom hopeful never to be copied in this country is the one in Formosa where the ceremony is nothing more than a swift kick delivered by the bridegroom to his bride.

In Kashmir and Ruanda, no bride is beautiful. The Kashmir bride is represented at her wedding by a camel. In Ruanda, the marriage consists of the bridegroom whitewashing his bride's face.

Brides and parents in Lapland long ago had it somewhat easier. There, a young man was not permitted to even become officially engaged to the girl of his choice until he presented her with a gift and promised wedding clothes to her parents. Guests at the wedding of a Lapland girl were supposed to give her a reindeer to start the family herd.

Egyptians and Dutchmen observed a reverse gift-giving custom. At Egyptian weddings, the bride's family presented embroidered handkerchiefs to the guests. In Holland, newly married couples were required to send two bottles of spicy, sugary wine to their friends.

In Turkey, the marriage contract required the bridegroom to give his wife bath money. If he didn't live up to the contract, she could take legal action.

IN AMERICA, the ceremony is sane and civilized. The bride and groom pledge their love and fidelity with two simple words—"I will" and the knot is tied.

Planning a trousseau for the honeymoon and future life, how to spend the budget, how to select a wedding dress, what a bride should know about the well-groomed household take a great deal of knowledge. Two outstanding fashion experts provide useful information and advice for young women entering a bright and dramatically different phase of their lives. A free booklet, one of a series devoted to current fashion, shopping, wisdom and good taste in dress, is yours for the asking. Just drop a postal card to THROUGH THE LOOKING GLASS, Courier Journal, 35 Scio St., Rochester, New York. Copies without charge or obligation will be on their way to you within a few days.

Aksel Schiotz Set At Linwood

Aksel Schiotz, the world famous Danish lieder and opera baritone, opens the Linwood Sunday Evening Concert series on July 17, with a lecture-recital, in the Round Garden of the Linwood Music School on the York-Pavilion Road, Linwood. In case of rain, the program will be in the Barn Theatre.

The Schiotz recital at Linwood inaugurates the 1960 Sunday Night Concert series at the country home of Mr. and Mrs. William Gratwick. The School is an outstanding community experience in music making and study. Now in its 13th year, the school offers instruction in orchestra, chorus, opera, stage department and related subjects, including classes for young people.

AREA RESIDENTS, tourists and other visitors to western New York are invited to attend the concert series without charge. Later this summer, after the Schiotz program, the series will offer the Linwood Chamber Orchestra, two performances of the children's opera, "Albert and Tiberius," and a concert version of Gluck's "Orpheus and Eurydice."

The Linwood School is a non-profit, educational institution, which provides instruction and an opportunity for participation in performance to interested residents of western New York State. It is located on the York-Pavilion Road in Linwood, and may be reached from York, on Route 36, or from Pavilion, which is at the junction of Routes 19 and 63.

Information on the Sunday Evening Concerts, or on the school itself, may be obtained by writing to the school at Linwood. The telephone number is Pavilion 2823.
