Brazil-bound Nuns

New York—(RNS)—Reverend Mother Tarsicia Marie (left), Superior General of the Franciscan Sisters of the Poor, with her secretary, Sister Marie Victoria, are shown before departing for Brazil to look over the possibility of opening a new mission. They were accompanied by the two American provincials—Mother M. Bathildis, Mount Alverno Convent, Warwick, N.Y., and Mother Mary Helen, Saint Claire Convent, Hartwell, Ohio.

Membership Boost Given By Bishop

The 1960 membership campaign of the Catholic Youth Organization was formally opened with a dinner meeting at Columbus Civic Center last night attended by 200 workers.

Principal speaker was Bishop Kearney who emphasized the value of the proper use of leisure time and the importance of CYO programs in developing character of young people.

Judge Thomas J. Meagher, president of the CYO Board of Advisors, presided at the opening dinner and discussed the need of generous community support in the form of memberships in order to carry out plans for the coming year.

GENERAL CHAIRMAN Paul F. Morris introduced his campaign aides, including Joseph J. Miller, head of the special gifts committee which has already obtained more than a thousand sponsored memberships and expects to produce 1,600 by the end of the campaign, and division chairmen Mrs. Joseph W. Denaro and Mark H. Touhey, Jr.

The first report dinner will be held Oct. 13th and the closing dinner on Oct. 19. The overall quota for the campaign is 4,000 members.

Cardinal Greets Japanese Royalty

New York — (RNS) — Francis Cardinal Spellman, Archbishop of New York, is introduced by John D. Rockefeller III to Crown Prince Akihito of Japan at an alumnae reunion for Religious of the Sacred Heart. Crown Princess Michiko (right), who is a graduate of the Sacred Heart International University in Tokyo, joined former students of 36 colleges and schools of the society at a reception in her honor.

New Group Promotes

Be Kind To Animals

Washington—(RNS)—A visiting British Benedictine priest is assisting here in the establishment of a new national Catholic organization that seeks to bring Church influence to bear in favor of more humane treatment of animals.

He is Dom Ambrose Agius, O.S.B., of Ealing Abbey, London, who for 25 years has been president of Britain's Catholic Study Circle for Animal Welfare.

Father Ambrose is making his own experience in this field available to a group of Catholic clergy and laity who in 1959 established and incorporated the national Catholic Society for Animal Welfare. The society has established headquarters here with Miss Helen Jones, a former staff member of the Humane Society in the U.S., as executive secretary.

THE ENERGETIC British priest, who recently observed the 45th anniversary of his ordination and who served as chaplain to British forces in the trenches of World War I, is visiting the United States to lead a series of retreats for the Benedictine order and to give lectures.

After 25 years of research, Father Ambrose has published a compilation of the teachings of the Popes, various cardinals, archbishops, and moral theologians on the subject of kindness to animals.

"The teachings of the Church with respect to the humane treatment of animals has been quite clear," Father Ambrose said, "although it is little understood in the United States, as it was in Britain before we launched our study."

He pointed to the historic practice of the blessing of the animals as evidence that the Church has always manifested a sympathetic interest in the welfare of the dumb creatures of the Earth who serve man and enliven his existence.

Msgr. Leroy McWilliams, pastor of St. Michael's church, Jersey City, N.J., who wrote the best-selling autobiography "Parish Priest" with Jim Bishop, is president of the newly formed American society. Archbishop Thomas E. Boland of Newark is its episcopal sponsor.

Several thousand members of both the clergy and laity, have already joined the new organization, paying a $3.00 annual membership fee. A special category of "associate members" has been set up for Non-Catholics, a practice borrowed from the English experience, and several hundred persons have joined.

Miss Jones, who heads the small office staff of volunteers as executive secretary, said the first objectives of the society was to make American Catholics acquainted with Church teachings on the treatment of animals.

Its second objective is to enlist their support for the enactment of better laws for the protection of animals and for stricter enforcement of existing laws.

While not sharing the view of the anti-vivisectionists that experiments involving pain to dogs, cats, guinea pigs, and other animals should be abolished, the Catholic groups is interested in seeing that experimental animals are properly housed and cared for.

American Clergy Enlisted To Chart Council Program

Vatican City — (NC) — The naming of members and consultors of the 10 commissions and two secretariats preparing for the Second Vatican Council now is complete, and all these bodies are beginning full-scale operations.

The central preparatory commission is currently completing large volumes of proposals for subjects to be discussed at the council. Each volume contains proposals from bishops of a geographical area or country. Their use is restricted to the various commissions and will not be made public until the council is in progress.

However, the volume containing the collected acts of Pope John XXIII concerning the council is being made available to the public. This is because its entire contents have already been published at various intervals.

Meanwhile, the Secretariat for Christian unity, presided over by Augustin Cardinal Bea, S.J., has set up headquarters in the Palazzo dei Convertendi on the Via della Conciliazione.

The location is regarded as particularly fitting since the building was given by Cardinal Gerolamo Casiali I in 1685 as "a hospice for those who have returned from heresy," as an inscription on one wall states.

There are 10 preparatory commissions besides the central commission of 74 cardinals, patriarchs, archbishops, bishops and heads of religious orders.

They are: A theological commission, a commission of the bishops and diocesan government, a commission for discipline of clergy and faithful, a commission for Religious, a commission for the discipline of the sacraments, a commission of the sacred liturgy, a commission for studies and seminaries, a commission for the Eastern Churches, a commission for the missions, and a commission for the lay apostolate.

There are three secretariats: for Christian unity, for communications media, and an administrative one to expedite the council's organizational affairs.
