AMERICA'S DEFENDERS.

National Encampment of the G. A. R. at Detroit.

DETROIT, Aug. 7.—The principal feature of yesterday's proceedings of the encampment of the G. A. R., was the election of a new commander in chief. The proceedings were somewhat spirited and about as interesting as anything that has happened during the week. There were three candidates in the field and the ballots resulted as follows: First ballot, Palmer 823, Weissart 270, Sneidburg 177, no choice.

On the second ballot the California delegation changed to Mr. Palmer, and others following he was finally elected by acclamation.

CAPTAIN JOHN PALMER.

Captain John Palmer, the new commander-in-chief, was born on Staten Island March 22, 1842, and has a splendid record. He enlisted in the Ninety-first New York volunteers Sept. 10, 1861, and was constantly with that regiment until it was mustered out July 3, 1865, taking part in all its engagements. He was severely injured at the battle of Five Forks in the combined charge of infantry and cavalry. Since the war he has been engaged in the fresco painting and decorating business at Albany, and had the contract for all the decorating of the new state capital.

Committees were appointed to frame resolutions on the deaths of General Sherman, Admiral Porter and Hannibal Hamlin.

Ben F. Stevenson of Kentucky was re-elected surgeon general by acclamation. At this point the committee appointed to report upon the address of the commander in chief made its appearance and a buzz of excitement and the encampment settled down for the night on the colored issue. It turned out that there was a majority and minority report.

The former, presented by ex-Congressman Conner of Ohio, antagonized the proposition to create provisional departments for the colored men, thus going counter to the recommendations of the commander in chief.

The minority report supported the latter and ended with a resolution recommending the erection of separate departments for the colored comrades in Louisiana and other Southern states, and empowering the commander in chief to take action accordingly.

The city looks somewhat deserted today in comparison to what it did in the earlier part of the week, owing to the fact that the veterans who have not yet left the city for home are nearly all taking pleasure trips to the various lake and river summer resorts, and by tomorrow night Detroit will again take on her natural proportions.

All of the visitors to the encampment join in words of praise for the hospitality of the citizens of Detroit and of the cordial greeting with which they have met on every hand. They declare that the city has done herself proud and that this just closed is one of the most enjoyable encampments ever held since the organization of the Grand Army of the Republic.

PALMER CORDIALLY WELCOMED.
The New Commander-in-Chief's Reception at Albany.

ALBANY, Aug. 10.—Commander-in-chief John Palmer received a warm welcome on his arrival from the west last night. All of the G. A. R. posts and Sons of Veterans and many other organizations of the city turned out to do him honor. On the arrival of his train at 7:45 he alighted, accompanied by the reception committee who had gone to Schenectady to meet him, and was immediately escorted to Harmanus Bleeker hall. The streets were lined with a brilliant line of parade was lighted brilliantly with red fire and fireworks. At the hall Captain Blase welcomed the commander in a well chosen speech on behalf of the G. A. R. of this city. Chairman Bowie of the common council welcomed him on behalf of the city.

WELCOMED BY GOVERNOR HILL.
Governor Hill then gave him a most cordial welcome on behalf of the state. He spoke of the Grand Army as a great organization. He felt proud to be in a position to offer greeting to an honored member and one of its most faithful servants. He had always been pleased to co-operate with him in securing assistance to such a worthy organization.

Commander Palmer replied, expressing his gratitude and was most grateful for the honor conferred. He spoke, especially of the reception tendered him by his fellow townsmen, which had been far beyond his expectation. Feeling the responsibilities he had assumed, he said that it would be his earnest endeavor to fulfill his duties to the satisfaction of his comrades as well as he was capable of doing. He was then escorted to his home amid great enthusiasm.

AMERICA'S GREAT POET.

LATEST PARTICULARS CONCERNING MR. LOWELL'S DEATH.

The funeral of the noted poet and statesman to be held Friday at Appleton Chapel, Cambridge.—The funeral service to be preached by Rev. Philip Brooks.—Mr. Lowell's Death Due to Liver Trouble.

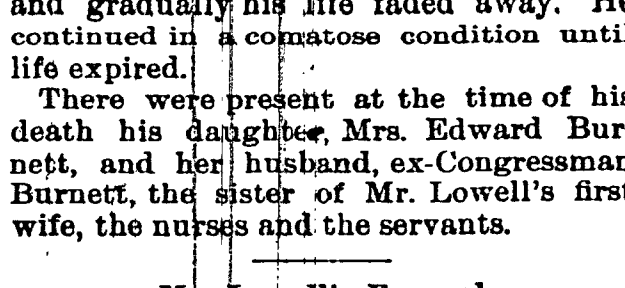

Boston, Aug. 13.—The latest dispatches received at an early hour this morning from Cambridge in regard to cause of death of Hon. James Russell Lowell are to the effect that the death of the noted poet and statesman was due principally to liver trouble brought on by gout, from which disease he had been a sufferer for several years past.

Mr. Lowell's ailment developed into serious illness about five weeks ago. Two weeks ago he became delirious, and until Monday last he was conscious only at brief intervals. He seemed to think he was far from home and longed to get back to Elmwood and his family.

HIS LAST WORDS.
Though evidently in much pain he made no complaint. The sudden appearance of hot weather had a very bad effect upon the patient. On Monday afternoon when the nurses were changing the bedding, he suffered intensely when moved and finally said: "Oh, why don't you let me be." These words were his last. He seemed from that time to loose heart and gradually his life faded away. He continued in a comatose condition until life expired.

There were present at the time of his death his daughter, Mrs. Edward Burnett, his wife, his sister-in-law, Mrs. Russell Lowell, the sister of Mr. Lowell's first wife, the nurses and the servants.

Mr. Lowell's Funeral.
BOSTON, Aug. 13.—The funeral of James Russell Lowell will be held Friday at noon in Appleton chapel, Cambridge. Philip Brooks will officiate.

James Russell Lowell was born in Cambridge, Mass., on Wednesday, January 19, 1819. He was the youngest of the five children of the Rev. Charles Lowell, himself the son of John Lowell, statesman, and descendant of Percival Lowell, merchant, who came from Bristol, Eng., to New England in 1630.

Lowell entered Harvard in his 16th year, and was graduated in 1838, and his notable class poem was his first published literary production.

In the law school of Harvard, Lowell received the degree of LL. B. in 1840 and was admitted to the bar. The next year his first volume of poems "A Year's Life," was published. These twenty poems were written under the influence of his mother, Maria, who was a woman of genius and an ardent abolitionist who, in 1844, became his wife.

A WOMAN'S INFLUENCE.
No doubt it was the influence of this woman that early turned Lowell's steps toward the rough path of the anti-slavery movement, which he followed with such noble persistence in his family if not avowedly in practice. Lowell and his wife were regular contributors to The Liberty Bell and his name appeared in the weekly which was edited by Maria Weston Chapman, and in the columns of the first series of the "Bigelow Papers" was given to the world, beginning with the issue for June, 1840, and ending in 1848.

HIS LITERARY LABORS.
His interest in the anti-slavery contest did not prevent Lowell from purely literary labors. Passing over some minor efforts we come to that superb allegorical poem, "The Vision of Sir Launfal," published in 1843. We may credit to this statement that the poem was composed in a single frenzy, in about forty-eight hours, during which the poet scarcely ate or slept.

In October, 1853, occurred the death of his wife, who had long been on a bed of illness. Two years before she had accompanied him on a trip through Europe, the chief fruits of which were the essays on Italian art and literature. Two years later, on Longfellow's resignation, Lowell was elected to succeed him as professor of modern languages and belles lettres in Harvard, and thereupon he took another tour abroad lasting two years. In 1857 the Atlantic, of which Lowell was the first editor, was founded.

LOWELL AS AN EDITOR.
In 1853 he became with Professor Charles Eliot Norton joint editor of the North American Review, a connection which he maintained until 1872.

In 1855 the solemn "Commemoration ode" was delivered. It was dedicated to the "sweet and shining memory" of Harvard's sons who fell in the war, and two of them were his own nephews.

Just before his recall from the Court of St. James in 1855, his second wife died. She was Miss Francis Dunlop of Portland, Me., whom he married in 1857.

Since his return to private life Lowell's home has been with his only child, the wife of Edward Burnett at Southport, Mass.

A DIPLOMAT AND STATESMAN.
James Russell Lowell was a man of affairs as well as a poet. Aside from the active interest which he took in the anti-slavery movement he was for a time well known in the world of politics. He was a presidential elector in 1876 and voted for Rutherford B. Hayes. He was appointed United States minister to Spain in 1877 and transferred to England in 1880. As minister to the court of St. James he made an especially good record. He remained in England until 1885, when he was recalled by President Cleveland to act as ambassador to the court of St. James. Lowell's fame as a poet, added to his tact and ability as a man of the world, made him one of the most popular diplomats who ever represented this country at the English court.

Expressions of Sorrow.
LONDON, Aug. 13.—Bert Harve writes to the United Press representative relative to the death of James Russell Lowell:

"To my mind as an American in the frank admiration and living remembrance shown for Lowell's intellect and character, personally I have to add my own sorrow for the loss of one of the most thoughtful and cultivated of our poets, and one of our best poets."

THE PILOT KILLED.
The excursion was sent out by the large dry goods house of Geiser of Brooklyn for the benefit of its employees, but many other people took advantage of the excursion to go along. In all there were about 250 persons, nearly all of whom were residents of Brooklyn and Williamsburg. The excursionists had two barges which belonged to the Mills Excursion company and were towed by a large tug.

The excursion party left Brooklyn early yesterday morning and arrived at Cold Springs Harbor about noon. The boats had barely put off from the dock on the return trip when the accident happened. Among those killed was the pilot of the barge. When the confusion had subsided the superintendent of Geiser's establishment made arrangements for sending the killed and injured to their homes in Brooklyn by special boat.

New York, Aug. 13.—The bodies of the fourteen persons who were killed by the accident on the barge Republic were brought to Brooklyn on a boat which landed at the foot of North Sixth street, Williamsburg. No reports were made to the police, but the latest information is that one of the bodies has been identified as that of Martha Seaman of Brooklyn. About one hundred and seventy-five people were injured in the accident. Most of them returned to Brooklyn on a special train.
