Nuns, Priests Attend Workshop

About 35 Catholic educators from secondary schools and colleges in nine of the United States were in Rochester last week to participate in an Eastman Kodak workshop on audio-visual education.

During the three day program, participants studied various aspects of audio-visual education, from communications strategy to programmed learning.

Topical material includes the development of communications strategy, audience analysis, the importance of visualization, the selection of mode and media, the AV planning board, and the need for continuity in the audio-visual presentation.

The visitors also inspected Kodak audio-visual laboratories and service facilities, AV production areas, projection rooms, and auditoriums at Kodak office, the company's administrative headquarters.

John L. Debes, an educational consultant in Kodak's audio-visual services division, was program coordinator.

Those attending from the diocese were: Sister Joseph Marie, Sister Mary Michael and Sister M.H.S.H., and Sister Mary Nata-Johanne Marie, Rochester; and ...lle, M.H.S.H., both of Fairport; Rev. Daniel Brent.
