Cornerstone for New Church

Bishop Kearney blesses cornerstone of new St. John's Church in Town of Greece. The new structure will replace a nearly century-old church which is now far too small for 1000 family parish. Target date to complete the new church is Easter, 1964. Father Donald Lux is pastor.

Notre Dame Crusaders Launch Grid Season

By MIKE MORAN

Notre Dame's Crusaders are on the march. Their first encounter will be against the Green Hornets of Southside, who blanked them out last year. The Crusaders are determined not to let this happen again this season. Saturday night's game will be held on the N.D. turf, on which the Blue and Gold are undefeated. They mean to keep it that way!

THE CRUSADERS again boast of top speed, although they are small in both size and number. There are twelve veterans from last year who will form the nucleus for the coming season.

All-City tackle Mike Malone and All-City second team quarterback Mike Johnston will spark the eleven. In spite of being one of the smallest backs in the area, Johnston has proved himself as a fine field general and an adequate passer.

The big boys on the line will be seniors Joe Brower, John Barnoski and Dan Gingrich, junior Mike Malone and soph Bob Barnoski. At end positions are seniors Gerry Rosplock, Bill Knott and Tony Morrow. The backfield with seniors Tony Cicotti, Tom Cieri and Ron Limoncelli and soph Jack Leonard are not very big, but they have proved themselves to be exceptionally fast and shifty runners.

This year's schedule has been beefed up with more challenging teams than last year. There is another addition to the team area: signs and signals in the locker rooms are reminders to get in there and FIGHT.

Coach Teta has been working his boys hard to toughen them up for a rough season. According to the coaches the boys are showing great promise due to their teamwork and speed. How this will hold against size and power can be told only after Saturday's game.

Films, Cameras For Missions

A missionary bishop in Tanganyika is looking for 16mm movie films (and projectors too) for use in Tanganyika.

Bishop E. C. Arthurs, Irish-born member of the Institute of Charity missionary order, said comedies, westerns, silent films are acceptable. His priests will use the films in mission outposts in their near-equator mission outposts.

Those who have any such films they wish to give to the prelate may call the Courier Journal, BA 5-4210.

Family Center Seeks Homes For Childern

Children ranging in age from new-born infants to maturing teenagers find temporary homes through the Rochester Catholic Family Center's foster home program. Father Joseph D'Aurizio, the Center's assistant director, explains the "pressure" on the Center to find more foster homes at the present time.

"We're always under pressure to get new foster homes," said Father Joseph D'Aurizio of the Rochester Catholic Family Center.

What did he mean by "pressure"?

Last year we had to find homes for 350 children and we had only 180 homes to put them in — that averages two to a home."

Actually he explained, most of the 180 homes had only one foster child at a time but "we'd much prefer a greater cushion in case of a flurry of needs."

Who are these foster children?

"They are children who can't stay in their own home. They need temporary on foster home care until their own home can take them back again."

WHY CAN'T they stay home?

"A few examples will explain it better—one couple called us recently. The mother was in a hospital as a result of an auto accident and the father obviously had to go to work every day. They had two young children and couldn't arrange for anyone to supervise them. We arranged for the children in a foster home. Their father stopped to see them each evening on his way to see his wife at the hospital and took them home weekends. The mother was still hobbled with a cast and quite nervous for a few weeks after her month in the hospital so the children stayed on at the foster home for a total of two months.

"Another case — a young mother with three children had a nervous breakdown and her husband was working at two jobs to make ends meet. We found a home for these children for a three month period and their mother, relieved of their daily care, made a remarkable recovery."

In cases like these, Father D'Aurizio said, the Family Center prefers keeping children of a family together in one foster home.

WHAT KIND of people make the best foster parents?

"Ordinary people who love children."

The Family Center obviously checks each prospective foster home to be sure children will find there "tender, loving care," as nearly a normal home life as in their own home, and the assurance that they will have a happy and religious atmosphere.

Foster parents don't necessarily have to have children of their own—some are older couples whose children have grown up, others are young couples with one or two children and anxious to make room for one or two more.

Doesn't this put quite a financial burden on foster parents?

"No," said Father D'Aurizio. "All costs of the foster child are borne by the Catholic Family Center. We don't expect 'charity'—we look for love for children. Many homes are capable of giving this love even though they couldn't afford to pay the expenses of an added child. We'll pay the expenses if they'll provide the loving care."

HOW URGENT is the need for more foster homes?

"There aren't any starving children huddled in doorways as far as we know in this area," said Father D'Aurizio, "but we would like to have another 50 homes we could turn to as new cases come to our attention.

"We think many more couples would welcome a child in need of a temporary home if they only understood our program better. That's why we are going to have a panel discussion by Family Center staff members at Corpus Christi school hall next Monday evening. We hope many people will come if just to hear our story.

Besides the Rochester Catholic Family Center, the diocesan Catholic Charities office has a similar center in Auburn headed by Robert McAvoy and in Elmira with Miss Mary FitzGerald in charge.
