Winning Streak Ends

A long winning streak came to an end this week when Bishop Kearney lost to Greece Olympia on the "Inter-High News Quiz" semifinals May 3.

But for the past three years, it seemed as if nothing could stop the Kearney team. They piled up victory after victory, copping top place both years when the current events quiz show was on radio station WROC and then making a strong bid for the spot again this year, on TV Channel 8.

Famous Churches of the World

In Mexico City You'll Want to Visit the Cathedral

If you plan to attend the Olympic Games this summer in Mexico City, the Cathedral should be among your "must" places to visit.

One of the oldest cathedrals in the Western Hemisphere, this great edifice stands on the site of the Aztec central square and temple (teocali) destroyed by Cortez, conqueror of Mexico, in 1521.

The church was begun in 1573, the main structure finished in 1667 and the towers in 1791.

The cathedral is the center of all the main religious festivities of Mexico. Facing it is the Plaza Constitucion, generally referred to as the Zocalo.

One of the peculiarities of visiting Mexico is that you'll notice no priests on the street. That's because an old law forbids clerics from wearing their priestly garb anywhere but in churches.

Consequently if you see "civilians" carrying black cassocks into the cathedral or other churches they are probably visiting-priests intending to say Mass there.

Sick and tired of chasing dust?

Rainbow WILL CURTAIL YOUR ANNOYING DUST PROBLEM!

All cleaners use airflow to clean. Because they force it through bags or dry filters, airflow is reduced and so is their ability to pick up dirt. As dirt clogs bag and filter pores, airflow is further impeded. That's why you clean better with a new bag or filter. RAINBOW USES NO BAGS OR DRY FILTERS! The dust is trapped in Rainbow's turbulent water bath which has no pores to clog. There is never a reduction in airflow or drop in cleaning efficiency.

WITH RAINBOW, YOU DON'T CHASE DUST... YOU TRAP IT IN WATER.

CCD Directors Urge Adult-Centered Education Apostolate

San Francisco — (NC) — A national meeting of directors of the Confraternity of Christian Doctrine (CCD) has called on the Church to make adult-centered, rather than child-centered, education its chief apostolate.

In the past, CCD has been largely identified with religious instruction of Catholic children who do not attend parochial schools.

(According to Father Daniel Holland, assistant director of the diocesan CCD program, Rochester has a two-pronged program which involves the adult.

(On the parish level, the CCD office is setting up parish boards which receive a solid theology training first, and then assume responsibility for adult religious education programs within the parish unit itself. Such programs include lectures, panel discussions, slide programs. "The training is an important first step . . . We want to know that they are sure of the material," Father Holland commented.

(The instruction of parents to prepare their own children for the sacraments have proved successful since its inception 1½ years ago, not only for the youngsters, but as a means of educating the adults involved.

(Father Holland also made note of the 100 catechists who have received religious instruction via the CCD, and will graduate this month after 60 hours of training.)

"We . . . state that the adult, not the child, should be the major area of concern of the teaching Church," the CCD directors said. It gave the following reasons:

—"The parent is the primary teacher and yet we have not done anything truly significant to sensitize parents to their obligation or equip them to play effectively an informal teaching role.

—"The adult and not the child is facing the questions and problems of the greatest implications and consequences. They are looking for assistance in living the Christian life in this world and with rare exceptions we have done little to help them.

—"The adult and not the child is the person who is going to be most instrumental in the incarnation of Christ-love and concern in the resulting brotherhood."
