Walter M. Hickey Succumbs at 83; Bishop's Father

Auxiliary Bishop Dennis W. Hickey was principal celebrant of the Requiem Mass offered for his late father, Mr. Walter M. Hickey, on Wednesday, June 19, 1968, at St. Theodore's Church. Bishop Fulton J. Sheen and Auxiliary Bishop John E. McCafferty were the other concelebrants.

Mr. Hickey, 83, died on Saturday, June 15, 1968, at St. Ann's Home, where he had resided the last four years.

Bishop Sheen preached a funeral homily at the Requiem Mass, which was attended by a large congregation, including Bishop James E. Kearney and 95 priests.

Besides his son, Bishop Hickey, Mr. Hickey is survived by two daughters, Miss Helen S. Hickey of Branxville, N.Y. and Mrs. N. J. Campbell Jr. of London, England; a brother, Charles F. Hickey of Warren Center, Pa.; and a granddaughter, Mrs. Kenneth Wynn of New York City.

Deputy Sheriff's Badge for Principal

Monroe County Sheriff Al Skinner surprised Mercy High students and Sister Mary Florence at a recent assembly by making her Deputy Sheriff in recognition of her cooperation with the law forces during her 40 years at Mercy. The Sheriff was a participant in a school program marking Sister Florence's retirement after 20 years as principal of the Blossom Road School.

Books

Newman and the Modern World by Christopher Hollis (Doubleday; $4.95). A persuasive study and a significant contribution to the literature about Newman, this author examines his writings and teachings through his Anglican years and his 45 years in the Catholic Church. He discloses those aspects which distinguish him from the religious leaders of his day and mark him as a unique 19th century precursor of the ideas and outlook of the Second Vatican Council.

Interior Prayer: The Exercise of Personality by Johannes Lotz (Herder & Herder; $5.95)

In an age when men feel threatened on every side by forces of disintegration an increasing number of people recognize that some form of mediation is necessary both for per-rooted growth in community. But this growing realization of the desirability of medictation often goes hand in hand with an increasing inability to meditate. It is this paradoxical situation that Father Lotz accepts as the starting point of "Interior Prayer.. In the first part of the book he examines the roots of the modern concern for meditation, and the actuality of the "return to the heart" that is its goal.

The Key Concepts of St. Paul by Francois Amiot (Herder & Herder; $4.95)

St. Paul attracts us by the brillance of his vision and by his noble character. But the richness and complexity of his thought, the profundity of his intuitions, and the subtlety of his reasoning processes are liable to deter any reader unpresonal coherence and for deep-pared for them. Though dazzling, the jewels of his thought are also obscure and it is only with difficulty that we assign them their place in a composite whole. We feel the need for an over-all approach to bring out the principle themes, to show their connection with one another, their consistency and their relationship to a central idea. Such an approach to the work of St. Paul is the aim of this book. Intended as a study of St. Paul's Key Concepts, it presents a short life of the Apostle and a fairly detailed analysis of his theology.

College Athletes Cowed by Intruder

By BILL RING

Philadelphia—(NC)—It'll be many a day before Brother Patrick Ellis, F.S.C., forgets the final week of the 1967-68 school year at La Salle College here.

And that goes, too, for Bernie Williams and Roland Taylor, both from Washington, D.C., who starred on the college's basketball team last season.

It happened around 2 a.m. Williams was awakened from a sound sleep by a noise outside the door of his second floor dormitory room. Williams was sleepy-eyed when he opened the door but closed it quickly, no longer sleepy-eyed.

Williams roused roommate Taylor with: "Look outside the door and see if you see what I just saw." Taylor opened the door and was startled wide awake by a very loud "Moo-oo-oo."

In the corridor was a cow, in natural color and sound. It wasn't long before all dorm residents were wide awake — especially Brother Patrick, who was in charge of the building.

"I telephoned the police immediately. The desk sergeant was very cooperative until I mentioned the specific nature of our problem. His response was: 'Oh, yeah, Brother, right away!' and hung up the phone," Brother Patrick related.

"It took two more phone calls before I could convince the police our problem was for real. Then they responded promptly, rounded up the farmer and called in a vet," the embarrassed Brother continued.

The farmer was not amused by the cow-napping prank and the vet was concerned about getting the animal to walk down two flights of stairs without injuring itself.

It seems it's much easier to get a cow to walk up a flight of stairs than it is to get one to walk down.

Historic Church To Be Torn Down

Potsdam, East Germany — The 200-year-old Garrison Church here, one of the most famous historic churches in Germany, will be razed to make room for highway expansion.

A monument of baroque architecture, the church, built in 1735, has played a significant role in German history and has been critized by East German Communists as a symbol of the "Prussian-feudalist system."

The book, which includes maps, diagrams of St. Peter's Basilica and color illustrations, is already available in English, German, French and Spanish.

School Closings

San Antonio, Tex. — (NC) — Two high schools and six elementary schools in the San Antonio archdiocese will not reopen in September, and two schools will lose grades seven and eight during the coming year.

The closures will involve about 1,500 students in the archdiocese, where more than 20 Catholic schools have closed during the past two years.
