Pope Reflects on Death

Castelgandolfo (RNS) – Pope Paul, who will be 80 years old on Sept. 26, used the occasion of his public celebration of Mass on the Feast of the Assumption of the Virgin Mary to reflect briefly on the inevitability of his death.

Speaking to 2,000 persons attending the Mass at the Church of Our Lady of the Lake, near the papal residence, the Pope recalled that the feast commemorated the mystery of the taking into heaven of Mary, body and soul, at the end of her life.

Then, referring to his advancing age, the pontiff said he would like to "make an appointment" with those present to celebrate the Feast of the Assumption together next year. "But," he said, "who knows if I, old as I am, will be able to celebrate this feast with you again. May God will it. But I see the threshold of the great beyond drawing near. Therefore, I take the opportunity of this very joyful meeting to greet you all and to bless you."

At the Mass on the banks of Lake Albano, the Pope personally gave Communion to a large number of the faithful.
