The Younger Generation Views High School Scene

BY JOAN M. SMITH

Ask Bob Kidera, over at McQuaid, what comes to mind when you say hectic and he'll come back with Benjamin Day topped off with a sports pep rally. But he smiled good naturedly as he explained about his involvement in the Friday Sept. 16 event which brought an interesting change in the McQuaid school day.

Each year the school sets aside a day when students bring their younger brothers and friends to school. Aside from attending their big brothers' classes, the young visitors are kept busy with a variety of adventures and that's where Bob came in. This year along with his Theology classes, public relations duties and moderating chores for the school newspaper, he coordinated Benjamin Day. He set up the programming which included a performance by the String Band, informal chess tournaments, basketball contests and films including one on Babe Ruth, a Buster Keaton comedy and a science fiction movie.

"The day," Bob explained, "gives them a picture of what high school is like and a chance to share their brother's school day.

"Some might be overwhelmed by it," he added, "but when they look back they'll remember the enjoyment."

Two visiting youngsters whom RapAround chatted with weren't so much overwhelmed as determined not to rush their growing up years Contrary to the concept that kids can't wait to grow up, Peter Grossl from French Road Middle School and Joe Zeccardi from St. Joseph's in Penfield agreed they were willing to wait to begin their high school careers They did, however, enjoy their day at McQuaid and were especially fascinated with the Psychology class they attended.

John, George, and Peter Morgan take a breather just before the pep rally to discuss their experiences and impressions of a McQuaid High School day.

Freshman George Morgan had his two brothers in tow; John, an eighth grader and Peter a sixth grader at Our Lady of Lourdes School. The boys had their curiosity satisfied by seeing what went on in their brother's classes and remained alert, trying to see if they could understand what was being taught.

According to Kidera, approximately 90 youngsters participated in Benjamin Day, the youngest being from the first grade which made Bob grin with relief. There had been years when some pre-schooler had toddled around the halls of McQuaid.

The boys, of all ages, enthusiastically enjoyed the pep rally which introduced the athletic teams. So, Benjamin Day-1977 was far from dull and a good time was had by all. Especially by the McQuaid students who enjoyed showing off their prestigious status as high school students to the younger generation.

Joe Zeccardi and Peter Grossl wait patiently for the McQuaid athletic teams to make an appearance.
