THE PAPAL LEGATE.

Archbishop Satolli has reached this country. There are divers rumors about as to the main object of his visit.

The following description of the papal legate is given: "He is in his 53d year and has worn the purple since 1888. He is a man of good presence, pleasing countenance and fine intellectual features. When the Monsignor was last here, he had but poor command of our language, but the ease and grace with which Ciceronian Latin rolled from his tongue when he spoke at the dedication of the Washington University, delighted the ecclesiastics who listened to him then, and demonstrated the erudition and accomplishments of the Apostolic delegate. He is a very eloquent orator, and his Lenten sermons in Rome are always a source of great pleasure to scholars. The Pope, who is deeply attached to Monsignor Satolli, created him Archbishop of Lepanto, and named him Director of the Ecclesiastical Academy for Nobles of Rome. Monsignor Guidi has been given the direction of this important college during the absence of Monsignor Satolli, who will probably pass two years in the United States in order to study the educational and other questions concerning the Catholics of the country."

The archbishop brought with him the letter to Secretary of State Foster in reply to that sent to His Holiness by Mr. Foster, a copy of which will be found on our front page. The letter is signed by Cardinal Rampolla and says:

"The august pontiff felt certain that the United States government would spare no pains to preserve the precious objects that are to be entrusted to it, from any mishap, and he returns his thanks for the kind offer that has been made for their transportation and for the free passage of the person who is to have charge of them. In the meantime his holiness, who has so many reasons to entertain special regard for the United States government, appreciates the liberty which is enjoyed in the said states by the Catholic church, and who justly admires the enterprise and progress of that country, has decided to be represented at the public demonstrations which are to be held there in honor of the Genoese hero on the fourth centenary of his memorable discovery, by a person who is no less distinguished by his personal qualities than by his grade in the ecclesiastical hierarchy."

This person is Monsignor Francesco Satolli, Archbishop of Lepanto, a prelate who is as highly to be esteemed on account of his virtues as for his profound scholarship, of which he has given many evidences in his writing. His Holiness does not doubt that this decision of his will be received with pleasure by the government and feels assured that your excellency will welcome the presence of your accustomed correspondent. Sharing these sentiments of the Holy Father, I gladly avail myself of the present occasion to assure you the assurance of my distinguished consideration and of my warmest regards, which I am your excellency's faithful servant."

While Robert G. Ingersoll has long been known as a blatant scoffer against religion, it has been generally supposed that in private life he was a gentleman. An incident in which the noted infidel figured recently shows he can be as brutal and coarse when off the platform as on it. Brother Maurelian, who has charge of the Catholic Educational exhibit at the World's Fair, entered one of the

THE LECTURERS.

The announcement made last week that three prominent Catholics will lecture in Rochester this winter was a pleasing one. The one lady and the two gentlemen named are good representatives of Catholic thought, and will no doubt attract large audiences.

Of Miss Conway it is almost unnecessary to speak, so well is she known to the Catholics of this city, her former home, where her literary gifts first attracted attention. Rochesterians are proud of her success and will welcome her most generously.

George Parsons Lathrop is the distinguished gentleman who a few years ago heeded God's call and joined the Catholic Church. His conversion was a nine days' wonder, since he is one of the most eminent authors in the New England States, or for that matter in the country. His wife is a daughter of Nathaniel Hawthorne. Since his conversion, Mr. Lathrop has done noble service for the church, has seized every opportunity of giving a reason, "for the faith that is in him," and has written considerably for different Catholic papers.

Conde B. Pallen is a young man who has gained considerable prominence as the editor of Church Progress of St. Louis, a paper which he has made remarkable for its strong stand on the school question. He has been particularly active in attacking the "Faribault plan" and because of his vigorous opposition to that compromise has been severely criticized in some quarters. He is as firmly opposed to what may be termed "Liberal Catholicism," and at the present time is writing a series of articles in which "Liberalism" and "Liberal Catholics" are severely scored.

THE CATHOLIC WAY.

Probably no higher tributes to the memory of Tennyson were given from any source than those found in last week's Catholic exchanges. All had a word of admiration for the dead poet-laureate though there was an almost unanimous sentiment of regret that the sweet singer should have died outside of the Catholic church, to which his English ancestors belonged. After such generous tributes to one who was not of their faith, who can say that Catholics are narrow or bigoted? Contrast this spirit with the treatment various anti-Catholic bigots are according Columbus simply because the great navigator was a Catholic! Better, though, that such bigots should slander and malign a Catholic hero, than that our co-religionists would give cause for the world to say we refused to recognize good qualities in our separated brethren.

READING CIRCLES.

The Catholic Mirror in reproducing an article on the above subject from these columns makes the following comments:

The long evenings of autumn are at hand, and soon they will grow into the longer evenings of winter. Beautiful are the sunsets, but short; when they are over, night draws on apace; the curtains are drawn, tea is enjoyed, and then follows the period between that reflection and bedtime. Several hours are before us—to some the pleasantest part of the day—which may be made dreary or useful and interesting, according to the resources or taste of him who has them to dispose of.

Cooper has written of the cozy winter evenings; a book and the fire and the cheerful talk of those we love may make it all too brief. Eleven o'clock, which is the sober bedtime of most people, will be sounded before one is aware, so quickly and stealthily fly the moments. If we have wasted them in dreary dozing and apathy, or by going out and engaging in coarse diversions, it is all the worse for us. Our time we have but once, and the use we make of it depends upon ourselves.

While Robert G. Ingersoll has long been known as a blatant scoffer against religion, it has been generally supposed that in private life he was a gentleman. An incident in which the noted infidel figured recently shows he can be as brutal and coarse when off the platform as on it. Brother Maurelian, who has charge of the Catholic Educational exhibit at the World's Fair, entered one of the Chicago hotels in search of Bishop Spaulding who was to meet him there. He sought out the room to which the clerk directed him but instead of the Bishop a party of strangers occupied the room. When the Brother inquired for Bishop Spaulding one of the men present jumped up and said: "I am a Bishop, I am a Pope, I am Robert G. Ingersoll." This outburst was followed by more ridicule of similar character.

The esteemed Monitor of San Francisco, California has entered upon its thirty sixth year. With the first number of the new volume, it appears in sixteen page form and so greatly improved in all its departments that it may be said to equal if it does not exceed in merit any Catholic newspaper in the land. In the present number Archbishop Riordan makes an earnest plea for the Catholic press and his expressions are approved by his suffragan bishops. An interesting history of the Monitor and its former editors is given. The present able editor Frances J. McGuire outlines the future policy of the Monitor in his characteristically pleasing style. Mr. McGuire's venerable father, custom house officer at Trenton, Ont., was a visitor at the JOURNAL office this week, an old time friend of the writer's long-dead father, he was truly welcome.

In most of the provinces of the country, meetings of the archbishops and their suffragan bishops have been held in accordance with the wish of the Holy See that such conference take place before the meeting of archbishops in New York next month. The deliberations of the prelates of the country will undoubtedly have a far reaching effect on American Catholicism. The principal subject of consideration, will, of course, be that pertaining to parochial schools. That the outcome will be a greater effort to give the Catholic children of the country a thoroughly Christian education there is little doubt. Another matter which will undoubtedly be well considered is the secret society evil. It is safe to say that after the archbishops have met, there will be no excuse for Catholics joining a forbidden society. The position of the church will be clearly stated.

Dr. Talmage calls attention to the interesting fact that the successful voyage of Columbus which resulted so beneficially to mankind, was begun on a Friday, and it was also a Friday when he landed at San Salvador. Surely if there were evidence needed to prove that there is no foundation for the foolish superstition which regards Friday as an unlucky day for beginning an important undertaking this should be sufficient. If this superstition had prevailed in Catholic Spain in that Catholic age, certainly Columbus and his five hundred men would have selected another day for the beginning of their voyage; but the true Catholic entertains no such notions.—Catholic Record.

Judge Tourgee says Columbus was a liar. His saying this does not make the great navigator untruthful, however. The Judge could not say that Columbus went on "A Fool's Errand" when he sailed from Spain.

There are one hundred and fifty Protestant sects in the United States. And yet there is but one God.

Rev. Father Story completed his twenty-ninth year as pastor of the N. B. V. M. Church Sunday October 9th.

Lawrence Hickey died at his residence Saturday morning aged 75 years. The deceased was an honest and industrious man and has been a resident of this village for nearly forty years. He leaves two sons and two daughters to mourn his loss. The funeral was largely attended at the Catholic Church Monday morning. The interment was in St. Patrick's cemetery.

An Acknowledged Fact.

It is an acknowledged fact that the late Father Mollinger confined the secret of his prescriptions which produced such wonderful cures, only to one druggist and that is A. F. Sawhill, 187 Federal street, Allegheny, Pa., and that all the original prescriptions, written by him are in Mr. Sawhill's possession. This fact cannot be successfully denied by those who are now using his name in order to deceive the public, by attempting to introduce a worthless imitation of the original preparations.—Pittsburgh Catholic.

Attention is called to the advertisement, in another column, of "Neuroton," an alleged cure for Neuralgia. We cannot pass upon the merits of the medicine before trying it, but it strikes us that the offer of "no cure, no pay," is entirely fair.

HER TROUBLES ARE ENDED

AFTER MANY YEARS OF TORTURE AND SICKNESS, SHE IS FINALLY CURED BY DR. FREEMAN, 105 FRANKLIN STREET.

Mrs. Geo. A. Peel, of Geneva, N. Y., wife of the well-known manufacturer of carbonated beverages and representative of one of the largest brewing companies of Rochester, has spent many years and much money in search of some doctor who could cure her. She describes her case in the following words: "Scarcely a day would pass but I would have a raging headache, preceded by dizzy spells. The headaches were followed by nausea and vomiting of large quantities of greenish, bitter matter. The pains in the stomach and liver were almost unbearable. I had a bitter taste constantly and was always thirsty, especially after the sick headaches. I felt as if I had a stone in my stomach, and was getting weak. The slightest exertion caused my heart to beat very fast. The least particle of food caused distress, with belching of gas and bloating of the bowels. I was always constipated. To add still more to my trouble, I suffered intensely from those diseases peculiar to women. I consulted several well-known doctors, but none could ever relieve me. I had so many favorable reports of Dr. Freeman that I decided to consult him. He at once told me that I had been improperly treated. The rapid improvement I experienced under his care clearly proved the truth of his assertion, as, after only a week of his treatment, I felt well in every way. My only regret is that I did not consult the doctor before. I could have saved many dollars by doing so. I shall be pleased to answer any further inquiry into my case, and the wonderful cure Dr. Freeman performed."
