INAUGURATION DAY.

GROVER CLEVELAND RECEIVES THE OATH OF OFFICE.

The inauguration a brilliant success in spite of unfavorable weather.—President Cleveland delivers his address to Congress and the people.

WASHINGTON, March 4.—The only drawback to the pleasure of the day was the inclement state of the atmosphere. All day long a very sharp, biting wind blew, and early in the day the falling snow added to the discomforts of the participants.

In spite of the chilling blasts, however, the crowds remained not only good natured but enthusiastic and the ceremonies passed off with comparatively little trouble.

It is estimated that over 100,000 visitors were in the city. The program for the day was carried out without a hitch.

The march to the Capitol was commenced shortly after 11 a. m. The president and president-elect were escorted to the Capitol by various military and civic organizations, and accompanied by two members of the committee on arrangements.

Vice President-elect Stevenson was accompanied to the Capitol by a member of the committee on arrangements and at once proceeded to his room, a residence in the room where he remained until after the inauguration ceremony when the oath of office was administered to him by his predecessor.

At the conclusion of these ceremonies the entire party at once repaired to the platform which had been erected on the east steps of the Capitol.

The president-elect's appearance in full view of the assembled multitude was the signal for a tremendous ovation, which lasted for 15 minutes.

My fellow citizens—in obedience to the mandates of my countrymen, I am about to dedicate myself to their service under the conditions and constraints of the constitution and the expression of confidence and personal attachment which has called me to this service, I am sure my gratitude can make no better return than the pledge I now give before God and these witnesses of unswerving and complete devotion to the interests and welfare of those who have honored me. I deem it fitting on this occasion, while indicating the opinions I hold concerning public questions of present importance, to also briefly refer to the conditions and constraints of the constitution and the expression of confidence and personal attachment which has called me to this service.

While every American citizen must contemplate with the utmost pride and enthusiasm the growth and expansion of our country, the sufficiency of our institutions to stand against the rudest shocks of violence, the wonderful thrift and enterprise of our people, and the demonstrated superiority of our free government, it behooves us to stand watch for every symptom of insidious injury that threatens our national vigor.

Manifestly nothing is more vital to our supremacy as a nation and to the beneficent purposes of our government, than the maintenance of our currency. Its exposure to degradation should at once arouse to activity the most enlightened statesmanship; and the danger of depreciation in the purchasing power of wages paid to our laboring population is a danger to prompt and conservative protection. In dealing with our present embarrassing situation as related to this subject, we will be wise if we temper our confidence and faith in our national strength and resources, with the soberest and most realistic consideration of our financial condition.

I am confident that such an approach to the subject will result in prudent and effective measures to maintain the integrity of our currency. The executive branch of the government cannot intervene, none of the powers with which it is invested will be withheld when their exercise is deemed necessary to maintain our national credit and the confidence of our people in the soundness of our financial system.

I refer to the prevalence of a popular disposition to the operation of the government, and the direct individual advantages. The verdict of our voters, which condemned the injustice of maintaining protection for protection's sake, enjoins upon the government to remove the tariff which is destroying the bread of kindred evils which are the unwholesome progeny of paternalism. This is the basis of republican institutions and the constant peril of government is the danger that it degenerates to the purpose of wily craft the plan of rules our fathers established and bequeathed to us as an object of our love and veneration. It perverts the patriotic sentiment of our countrymen and attempts to a selfish calculation of the selfish gain to be derived from their government's maintenance. It undermines the self-reliance of our people and substitutes in its place dependence upon governmental favoritism. It stifles the spirit of true Americanism and the noblest trait of American citizenship. The lessons of paternalism ought to be unlearned, and the better lesson taught that, while the people should patriotically and cheerfully support their government, they should not include the support of the people.

The acceptance of the principle leads to a refusal of bounties and subsidies, which burden the labor and thrust of a portion of our citizens to aid ill-advised and languishing enterprises which they have no right to support. The challenge of wild and reckless pension expenditure, which overlaps the bounds of grateful recognition of patriotic service and prostrates to violence the people's prompt and generous impulse to aid the disabled in their country's defense. Every thoughtful American must realize the importance of checking, at its beginning, any tendency in public or private station to regard in frugality and economy as a virtue which is to be sought at the expense of the people's money by their chosen servants and encourages prodigality and extravagance in the home life of our countrymen. Under the scheme of pensioning, the people's money is a crime against the citizen; and the contempt of our people for economy and frugality in their personal affairs, deplorably saps the strength and sturdiness of our national character.

The existence of immense aggregations of kindred enterprises and combinations of business interests formed for the purpose of limiting production and fixing prices, is inconsistent with the principle of free competition and every independent activity. Legitimate efforts in business should not be superseded by an enforced concession to the demands of combinations that have the power to destroy competition and to the waste of the benefit of cheapness which usually results from wholesome competition.

The aggregations and combinations frequently constitute conspiracies against the interests of the people. In all such cases, they are unnatural and opposed to our American sense of fairness. To the extent that they can be reached and retained by Federal power, the general government should relieve our citizens from their influence and the public safety and the interest of the people.

Loyalty to the principles upon which our government rests positively demands that the equality before the law which is guaranteed to every citizen should be justly and in good faith maintained.

Colored Men Miraculously Saved.

SPRINGFIELD, Mich., March 3.—Last Friday night Edward Aplund and John Sundblad were buried under 100 tons of rock in the Winthrop mine and were supposed to have been killed. Yesterday, however, the party which was digging for their remains found the men alive and unhurt. The mine timbers had fallen in such a way as to make a small chamber, and a broken air pipe supplied them with fresh air from another part of the mine.

President Cleveland's Close Shave With Many People.

WASHINGTON, March 3.—Mr. Cleveland received the public twice during the day, each reception lasting less than an hour. He shook hands with about 1,000 people, although fully 8,000 passed through the White House. At 3 o'clock the doors were closed to those not on business and this rule, which has been observed for many years, will be continued.

The only incident of note of the public reception was the presentation to the president of a beautiful silk banner by the pupils of the Central Female college of Tuscaloosa, Ala.

Secretary Herbert introduced the young ladies who delivered the gift. The banner contained the program observed by the president at the inauguration.

John W. Cassmaker came to pay his respects and to bid an official goodbye to the president.

J. W. Finch of Glen Falls, N. Y., who helped along the Cleveland campaign fund by large contributions, also saw him. Among the callers were several of the Lakewood and Buxard's Bay friends of Mr. and Mrs. Cleveland. One of them was Mrs. Frank Stevens who was so intimate with the Cleverlands at Lakewood.

Anti-Heretic Men Victorious.

TROY, N. Y., March 3.—The anti-Heretic faction at Albany gained a decisive victory yesterday when Justice Furman of Troy handed down a decision granting the application to compel Mayor Manning to cause to be printed in the Albany official papers a list of the inspectors of election, poll clerks and ballot clerks appointed at the meeting of the city election commissioners last Saturday. At that meeting the list of clerks and inspectors named by Mayor Manning was rejected by the board, and the list prepared by C. F. Armitage and C. T. Gregory, members of the commission, was adopted.

Brasilians Revolutionists Quiet.

VALPARAISO, Chili, March 3.—Victories of the federal party in Rio Grande do Sul, Brazil, are reported less frequently now, and the truth is gradually coming to light. The seizure two weeks ago of a ship laden with arms and ammunition for the revolutionists by the Uruguayan authorities has not crippled the revolutionists as they have not been able to take advantage of their earlier successes.

The army encamped outside of Santa Anna has been compelled to retreat quietly, because it has no ammunition and cannot attack the Castilista stronghold.
