AT THE WORLD'S FAIR.

A GLIMPSE OF THE GREAT WHITE CITY.

Many New Buildings and Exhibits Opened to Public View—Interesting Notes on Things and Persons Connected With the World's Columbian Exposition From Day to Day.

WORLD'S FAIR GROUNDS, June 1.—Yesterday was to have been Wheelmen's day at the fair, but Architect Burnham, whose official title is director of works, although the construction part of the exposition is practically finished, countermanded the permit issued to the wheelmen's clubs and leagues to have a cycling parade within the grounds. The wheelmen could not parade in the park. They could come up to the gates on their wheels, leave them in the big shed erected for that purpose, and see the exposition for 50 cents like an ordinary visitor, but they must not celebrate.

WORLD'S FAIR GROUNDS, June 2.—The "Old Kentucky Home" at the World's fair grounds was dedicated yesterday. It is the Blue Grass state building and one of the most attractive in the White City. Supplementary to the ceremonies Miss Enid Yandel's statue of Daniel Boone was unveiled. The statue was presented to the state by the Filson Historical club of Louisville.

It was the intention to make the official dedication of the Minnesota building an occasion of much festivity. Governor Nelson and staff and many prominent citizens of Minnesota had been invited and the date fixed upon for the ceremonies. While preparations were being made the Minnesota Press association arrived in Chicago and unexpectedly appearing at the Minnesota building dedicated it with a program of their own. The editors then went home thinking nothing more of their pranks.

Governor Flower, who arrived in the city yesterday, spent the afternoon at the fair in company with a party of New Yorkers.

WORLD'S FAIR GROUNDS, June 3.—Director Charles H. Schwab of the World's fair says that the exposition has cleared $250,000 on the month of May, and as a result of a general reduction of forces, to begin next Monday, a better result is confidently anticipated for the month of June.

The world's congress on social purity at the art institute was presided over by Archbishop Ireland, who delivered the opening address, following President Bonney's address of welcome and a response by Aaron M. Powell, president of the New York committee for the prevention of obscenity. Addresses were also delivered by Mrs. Ballington Booth of the Salvation Army and Rev. J. M. Cleary of Minneapolis. About 400 people were present at yesterday's session.

The National Christian League for the Promotion of Social Purity met in an adjoining hall and were addressed by Bishop Fellows and other distinguished speakers.

WORLD'S FAIR GROUNDS, June 5.—There was no great outpouring of the workday class or any other class at the exposition yesterday. The oppressive heat and a heavy storm of lightning, thunder and rain, which came in the middle of the afternoon, accounts in part for the decreased attendance. But compared with the multitude of visitors last Sunday the second open Sunday at the World's fair can hardly be called a success, judged by the standard of the popular approval and the presence of laborers, for whose benefit and edification in particular the gates of the fair are open.

WORLD'S FAIR GROUNDS, June 6.—Heavy clouds hung over Jackson park yesterday morning. About noon, however, the sun came out. The Spanish section, located just west of Columbia avenue, is in a backward state, only the Moorish arches being finished. Princess Enlalia will not be favorably impressed with the condition of the Spanish exhibits at the fair. She will not visit the fair until Thursday and in the interim the forces are working night and day to have the grounds in proper condition for her inspection.

The Sunday Opening Case.

CHICAGO, June 1.—An immense crowd of spectators gathered in the United States court of appeals to listen to the arguments in the injunction suit brought by the United States government to restrain the opening of the fair on Sunday.

The legal talent arrayed on either side was something formidable. District Attorney Michrist was accompanied by his assistant Judge Hand, ex-Solicitor-General Aldrich, Attorney James T. High and Attorney David Fales. On the opposite side were, Attorneys Edwin Walker and Clair. Attorney W. E. Mason was also court representing the interests of C. W. Clingman, who has secured an injunction in the state court compelling the World's exposition to open its gates on Sunday.

CHICAGO, June 2.—The proceedings in the United States circuit court to determine whether or not the World's fair may be legally opened on Sunday were continued yesterday. That the public interest in the matter is unabated was evidenced by the throng that packed the courtroom and its approaches, many minions of the Gospel being conspicuous by their occupancy of the front benches. Argument in behalf of the government was resumed by ex-Solicitor General Aldrich.

CHICAGO, June 3.—Argument in the case of the government against the exposition authorities for an injunction against the opening of the gates on Sunday was concluded yesterday by Attorney High on behalf of the government. The court will take the matter under advisement.

CHICAGO'S QUEST NOW.

Infanta Enlalia Welcomed at the World's Fair City.

CHICAGO, June 6.—The Infanta Enlalia arrived here this afternoon and Chicago turned out en masse to welcome the royal visitor.

Hours before the train bearing the royal party arrived the crowds commenced to assemble and soon the streets approaching the station were packed. Soldiers had such a crowd turned out to greet the arrival of a visitor to the World's fair city and never before has enthusiasm ran so high at the presence of a visitor as is the case today.

If the Duke of Veragua's welcome was warm in its cordiality, the greeting vouchsafed to the princess today was wildly enthusiastic.

The Infanta's party was met at the station by a committee of city officials appointed for that purpose, H. Chatfield Taylor, the Spanish consul and others.

Any doubts which may have been entertained as to the cordiality of the Infanta's reception are set at rest for the

THE BORDEN TRIAL.

MOODY OPENS THE CASE FOR THE GOVERNMENT.

He dwells on the Prisoner's Conjectures, Statements, Predictions of Disaster, and Details of Her Stepmother—Skulls and Hatchets In Court—The Jury View the Scene of the Crime at Fall River.

NEW BEDFORD, Mass., June 7.—In opening the government's case in the trial of Lizzie Borden for the murder of her father and stepmother, Mr. Moody described in detail the house in which the tragedy occurred and the occupants thereof at the time of the murder and having carried the description up to the time of retiring the night previous to the murder, he went on to say:

"The prisoner slept in her own room that night and Morse in the guest's chamber. Mr. and Mrs. Borden slept in their room over the kitchen, and Bridget

LIZZIE BORDEN.

Sullivan slept in her room above in the third story. In the morning Bridget was first up, we may safely assume, on the proof that the only human beings in the house that night were those we have mentioned. Bridget got her kneel down stairs and built a fire, got the milk at the rear door and locked it after she brought it in.

"There was a screen door here and this it was which Bridget locked after she got the milk. Lizzie came down, then Mrs. Borden and then Mr. Borden. Mr. Borden did some chores in the barn and was seen by Bridget. She saw Morse only at breakfast with the others. After breakfast the first one to depart was Morse at 7:45 and Mrs. Borden let him out and locked the screen door behind him. Soon after Morse went away the prisoner came down and ate her breakfast.

"While she was eating Mr. Borden went up stairs and Bridget went out in the yard because she was sick. When she came back Mr. Borden had evidently gone down town. Mrs. Borden and Bridget had some talk about washing windows, and the latter was told to do the work. Mrs. Borden disappeared then and it will appear that she told the prisoner that she was going up stairs to put some pillows on the bed in the spare room. You will be satisfied that this was not far from 9:30 o'clock and that she never left her room alive again, for no living person saw her alive again except the assassin. When preparing to wash the windows Bridget went to the back door and saw the prisoner there, and asked her not to lock the door as she wanted to come in and get her water, but she said afterward that she might lock it if she wished and she would get her water from the barn.

"The door was left unlocked and the prisoner went into the house. There were two sitting room windows which were washed first, then Bridget came to the front of the house and then to the north side and washed the parlor and diningroom windows. She saw neither Mrs. Borden nor the prisoner during all the time she was washing these windows. When she finished she came in, locked the door and went to the inner side of the windows. She had begun her work there when somebody was heard at the front door. Let us find out what time this somebody came to the door, because it was Mr. Borden.

"At 10:25 Mr. Borden was at the store of Mr. Clegg, who fixes the exact time. He left at 10:40 another store for his home, but a short distance away. Mrs. Kelly saw him coming from the store and when he had evidently tried to get in and taking out his latchkey to use at the front door. Mrs. Kelly fixes the time, but it will be shown that the clock she took the time by was not reliable. When he came home Bridget found the front door locked and bolted contrary to custom at that house. He had put his key in but the door was locked and bolted.

"He came in and made some talk about opening the door and the prisoner from the hall above made some laughing exclamation. At that time Mrs. Borden's body lay above dead probably more than an hour. The prisoner then came to him asking him for mail and said: 'Mrs. Borden is gone out. She had a note and has gone in answer to it.' That was a lie to stifle inquiry. As Bridget was washing the windows again the prisoner got an ironing board and went to work and then she told Bridget the falsehood about the note. She said she was not about the door as she might go out. Bridget did her work and was about to go up stairs when the prisoner said: 'There's a cheap sale of goods down town where they are selling goods at 8 cents a yard.' Bridget said she guessed she would have some.

"Then Bridget went up stairs and there was nothing more until the alarm came. Then she came down, was sent to Dr. Bowen's and then to Miss Russell. Mrs. Churchill came by accident and the alarm was given to the police at 11:15. It could not have been far from 10:45 when Mr. Borden reached home. The prisoner was the last person left with her father alive and she said she was in the back yard when she heard a groan and went in and found her father dead. She sent Bridget for Dr. Bowen and failing to get him sent for Miss Russell and it must be borne in mind that this was the woman to whom Lizzie had predicted disaster only the night before.

"Mrs. Churchill came only by accident. Bridget asked: 'Shall I not go down for Mrs. Borden?'

"No," said the prisoner. I am not sure, but I think I heard her come in; I wish you would try to find her," and Bridget and Mrs. Churchill went up stairs and when near the landing the dead body was seen on the floor near the guest chamber. It is to be regretted that Dr. Bowen was the family physician or we might have obtained from him some accurate information. He said Mrs. Borden had died of fright, for he so expressed himself at the time. The prisoner told Dr. Bowen she went to the barn to get a lead for sinkers; she told Miss Russell she went to get a piece of iron to fix the window with. She told Officer Mallory that she was in the barn, heard a peculiar scraping, went in and discovered her father.

"She first said that after Bridget went up stairs she went into the barn to get lead to make sinkers, but when she gave a later and detailed account she said she went up there to open the window, and some pears, came back to the house, looked at the fire, found it was low, went to her room to wait for the fire to come up, came down and discovered her father. Here is a difference of stories as to the discovery of her father.

"This day was one of the hottest days of that summer; the loft of the barn was stifling in its heat. Multitudinally went into the barn, just as they were at the scene, looked at the floor and saw that the preliminary lay thick on the floor. He stepped in it and saw plainly every footprint he made.

"It was believed that Mrs. Borden died before her husband and this will be sought to be proved; her blood was congealed; his was fresh and flowing. There will be testimony of medical experts to show the condition of the stomachs of the bodies, just as there was at the preliminary hearing. There was partially digested food in the woman's stomach; in Mr. Borden's none. Men who are competent to give an opinion will give you evidence on all these things.

"About the two rooms in which these homicides were committed there was more or less of blood spatters; there has been produced for inspection the clothing said to have been worn by the prisoner that morning, the dress with light spots and skirt. The most rigid examination by the best expert in the country shows no blood on the dress and but one minute spot on the skirt. Now the prisoner has said that the reason she left her ironing was because the fire was low; she put some wood in and went to the barn, when she went out the wood was there and the fire was out. It will appear that soon after the alarm an officer was attracted by Dr. Bowen doing something at the stove and he looked in and saw what appeared to be a large roll of burned paper.

"The prisoner had on a light blue dress with a small figure which she was in the habit of wearing. Dr. Bowen will say that she had on a cheap drab colored dress that morning. Mrs. Churchill will say that she had on early a light blue ground dress and a diamond figure of any blue and the dress with light spots was not the one she had on when she (Mrs. Churchill) arrived at the house. Miss Russell and the prisoner went to her bedroom soon after the former came and the prisoner said she wanted Winwood for an undertaker. When Miss Russell came back from her errand to the undertaker, she found Lizzie coming from Emma's room with the pink wrapper on.

"The chief justice instructed the jury as to what the view was to be taken for and then they were dismissed to report for duty this morning at 9 o'clock.

MARTELLA ELECTROCUTED.

Giovanni Martella's Slayer Pays the Penalty at Clinton Prison.

DANMORA, June 6.—Scipione Martella, the murderer of Giovanni Martella, today paid the penalty of his crime in Clinton prison.

The electrocution caused little excitement here as the murderer had few friends and no great amount of sympathy was felt for him, owing to the cold blooded atrocity of his crime.

The execution was a quiet and strictly private one; no persons being present except the necessary witnesses, press representatives, etc.

The prisoner, although exhibiting a certain amount of nervous agitation for the past few days although fully realizing his position has still retained his health, and has borne up well all things considered. Warden Thayer read the death sentence to him yesterday, to which he listened with stoical silence and few signs of emotion. He passed a quiet night, and when the hour arrived when he seemed resigned to his fate. He was conducted to the death chamber, walking in a dazed way, as though in a dream, and took his seat mechanically. He was quickly strapped in place, and while the priest was still uttering the prayer to Heaven for mercy on his soul the current was turned on without loss of time and in the twinkling of an eye life had fled. The usual voltage was used and the chair did its duty well.

The electrocution was pronounced a success.

The crime for which Martella was today electrocuted was a peculiarly bold and bloodthirsty one.

The victim was one Giovanni Martella, a fellow countryman of Martella, and the murder was the result of jealousy in connection with Martella's mistress.

The killing occurred at Saratoga on May 5, 1892, and was perpetrated on the street, Martella approaching his victim and slashing his throat from ear to ear.

The electrocution today was the third which has taken place in Clinton prison under the new law and the 15th in the state since the law was passed.

The same chair in which Wood and Loth died was used.

Big Gasser Near Findlay.

FINDLAY, O., June 6.—The city has drilled in a 30,000,000 gasser in the Creighton farm five miles east of here. When the gas was struck the flow was so strong that the tools were blown out of the well. An effort to shut the well in failed and tubing was blown higher than the derrick. This well outrivals the famous Karg and the roar of the escaping gas can be heard for five miles. There is a great excitement.

"When those bodies were found (here photographs of their condition were shown) it was seen that not a thing in the house had been disturbed; no drawers opened and ransacked; no evidence of a struggle in any form; the assailant had been able to approach each of the victims in broad daylight and without a murmur or a struggle had laid them low.

"Mrs. Borden's face was on the floor and the right side of the head hacked in pieces. Mr. Borden was found on the sofa in the sitting room. He apparently had passed from life to death without a struggle, and his head was hacked as was his wife's. The government will prove that there was an unkindly feeling between the prisoner and her stepmother; that she was dwelling on murder and predicting disaster and cataloguing defenses; that from the time when Mrs. Borden went up stairs to the time when the prisoner came down an hour later, there was no other human being there but this prisoner at the bar; that these acts were done in a being; and that she may have had a familiar knowledge of the interior of the premises, and of the habits of the occupants; that she made contradictory statements as to how she found the bodies, and that she will be asked to say whether or not she has any reasonable hypothesis existing in her mind as to the cause of the murder more about this case than she has thus far disclosed."

Counsel closed by saying: "The time for hasty and inexact reasoning is past. We are to be guided from this time forth by law and evidence only. I conjure you, gentlemen, to keep your minds in that same open and respectful attitude which you have maintained today to the end. When that end comes, after you have heard the evidence on both sides, the arguments of the counsel and the instructions of the court, God forbid that you should stop one step against the law or beyond the evidence. But if your minds, considering all these circumstances, are irresistibly brought to the conclusion of her guilt, we ask you to go on and declare her guilty. By so doing, and only by so doing, shall you make true deliverance of the great issue which has been submitted to you."

Mr. Moody finished his opening at 10:55 and the jury was given a brief recess. At the close of the opening Miss Borden had fallen back in her seat, completely exhausted, and her counsel, Mr. Jennings, and one of the clerical friends administering relief in the form of smelling salts and cold water.

When the jury returned the case was opened by the government putting on its first witness in the person of Thomas Kiernan, a civil engineer. He had drawn plans of the streets in the vicinity of the Borden house and of the house itself and identified them as shown by counsel. He said if a man stood on Second street and brought his eye directly in a line with the past the corner of Dr. Kelly's house and the southeast corner of Borden's house he could see 12 inches of the barn door on the Borden place.

Mr. Knowlton asked the court to allow the jury to take a view of the Borden premises.

Governor Robinson, who consulted Miss Borden in regard to accompanying the jury to Fall River, announced that his client waived her rights in the matter and would not go with them.

Messrs. Hodges, Brown, Nickerson and Arnold of the deputy sheriffs were designated by the sheriff to look after the jury and Messrs. Moody for the commonwealth and Mr. Jennings for the defense were designated as representing counsel.

The chief justice instructed the jury as to what the view was to be taken for and then they were dismissed to report for duty this morning at 9 o'clock.

THE JURY VIEW THE PREMISES.

FALL RIVER, Mass., June 7.—About 1:30 o'clock the jury walked to the Borden house and were admitted with the four men who had charge of them. Also accompanying them into the house were District Attorneys Knowlton and Moody, Messrs. Robinson and Jennings, Assistant Marshal Fleet and Lieutenant Edson controlled a posse of men who, had been about the house since morning governing the crowds of curiosity seekers. When they had looked over the house and the immediate surroundings they inspected the building and premises outside and walked to the places where Mr. Borden was known to have been preceding his death.

The execution was a quiet and strictly private one; no persons being present except the necessary witnesses, press representatives, etc.

The prisoner, although exhibiting a certain amount of nervous agitation for the past few days although fully realizing his position has still retained his health, and has borne up well all things considered.
