Some one has computed that the college endowments of Massachusetts foot up $10,050,000. The buildings and grounds are worth $5,013,000, while scientific apparatus of all the higher institutions is worth $1,020,000.

A Philadelphia architect contemplates the erection of a building which will be a complete village in itself. The engraved eggs that are exposed for sale are very puzzling to those who do not know how easily the engraving is done. The writing is done on the shell with wax or tallow, and then the egg is soaked in a weak dilution of some acid; even vinegar will answer the purpose. The shell is eaten away by the acid wherever not protected by the wax, and the writing appears in bold relief. The art was discovered in England about 200 years ago, and the inventor came near being burned for sorcery, as he tried to pass off some of the inscriptions for prophecies.

Since jeweled fillets became the rage among rich women, New York jewelers have produced many fabulously expensive things of this sort. Regular coronets are not uncommon, and one jeweler has made to order for a woman a reproduction of one of Queen Victoria's crowns, an elaborate affair of gold enriched with handsome work and jewels.

A new biography has been written of Queen Victoria, and the statement in a previous biography that, "being aroused at 5 o'clock in the morning to receive the notification that she had succeeded to the throne, she hurried into the room wearing a wrapper and shawl, with her 'naked feet in slippers,'" is hotly controverted. It was "the color of her hose" that misled the witnesses, said her latest biographer and courtier.
