THE VIRGIN OF PALERMO.

A Relic of St. Rosalie, Who Saved a City From Plague, Received In Brooklyn. The Rev. Joachim Garofalo of the Church of St. Michael Archangel, Brooklyn, recently received a relic of St. Ro-

William Mooris with his little salie, patron saint of Palermo, Italy. To Italians this relic has a peculiar daughter, of Corning, is visiting his significance. St. Rosalie was a beautiful young woman, daughter of Prince Simbaldi, a descendant of Charles the Great. While yet a young girl she retired to a cave on Mount Pelligrino, subsisting on grasses and herbs until her death on Sept. 4, 1160.

That which endeared the saint to Italians was her instrumentality in saving the population from cholera that raged in its most virulent form in Palermo and the adjoining country in 1625. St. Rosalie, as a beautiful young woman, appeared to a citizen and told where her body could be found. The archbishop gathered the clergy about him, repaired to the cave and found the body according to the instructions in the vision. With religious pomp the body was taken to Palermo, and as it was carried through the streets those dying of cholera were restored to health. All who looked upon the remains were cured, and the scourge was driven from the city. A church has since been built on the mountain on the site of the cave and closing it. Back of the altar in a silver case can be seen the head of the "Virgin of Palermo." The remainder of the body is in a silver casket in the cathedral at Palermo, the latter place being the Mecca of the Sicilians. Many and marvelous miracles have resulted through the agency of these relics. The relic now in Brooklyn, with authentic papers, was sent by Cardinal Alesia, archbishop of Palermo, through, Commendatore D. Lorenz Merlino, general secretary and director of the central office of the new Society of St. Michael Archangel, founded recently in Palermo for the protection of the Italians of the south who came to America. Bishop McDonnell of Brooklyn, having examined the authenticity of St. Rosalie's relic. granted permission to expose it for public veneration.

The relic consists of several similar pieces of bone grouped together, and altogether not making a lump as large as the thumb nail. It is inclosed in a silver elliptical case, and this is set in a solid "ostensorium." In this the relic is shown upon the altar.

A Condemned Title. The perverted genius of the French, as in other matters so in devotions, betrays them at times. Of late a succession of new fangled associations for pious objects, under some novel designation, has exercised the faithful and did not man congregations. And now the holy office has been obliged to speak very plainly indeed. Cardinal Parocchi addresses a letter to the bishop of Chartres on the subject of the title given to our blessed Lord of Penitent or Penitent For Us, and communicated to him the following decree: "So far back as Jan. 18, 1875, the holy Roman universal inquisition had counseled in a general manner to refrain from certain unusual titles of devotion and particularly from the title of Penitent applied to our Lord Jesus Christ. But having understood that there is still obstinately kept up at Loigny an association styled of the Sacred Heart of Jesus Penitent, the founders and supporters of which, notwithstanding the repeated condemnations of the supreme pontiff, continue to invent with sacrilegious audacity and to publish visions and revelations of the Sacred Heart of Jesus Penitent, the said holy Roman and universal inquisition, after mature examination, proscribes absolutely and condemns the titles, Heart of Jesus Penitent, Heart of Jesus Penitent For Us, Jesus Penitent

For Us."—Catholic Herald.

Three Masses For Victor Hugo. The Paris Gaulois relates the following story of Victor Hugo: "A few weeks ago an old negress came from Bridgetown, on the island of Barbadoes, to a missionary and asked him to read three masses for Victor Hugo. The missionary was astonished and at first believed that he had misunderstood the visitor. the ceremony at the church. The officer deserted his wife, who consequently became almost insane and was cared for in that condition by the negress. The negress wrote to the poet of the sad condition of his child. Cured of an Ulcer on the Leg in 30

Four years ago the veins of the leg began to en-large. Soreness, lameness, and inability to wark on this limb were the succession of symptoms which made the life of Mrs. Keller a hardship to endure. To make matters still worse the veins and tissues surrounding them began to inflame and in due time an open sore was the result. She took all kinds of medicines, used all kinds of ointments, salves and powders, but everything seemed to make it worse. On May 21st she consulted Dr Freeman, at his institute, No. 105 Franklin street, Rochester, N. Y., and began treatment. She improved rapidly from the start and in thirty days the ulcer was entirely healed and has remained so. A letter from her husband dated July 23d says: Dear Dr. Freeman, I wish to thank you for the vonderful cure you have made in the case of my wife. She is completely restored to health and I would willingly have paid you ten times the amount you charged for your services."

"A House Without Pictures is Like a House Without Windows."

146 East Main St

Most people will coincide with the views of the author who is quoted above, still there are many houses well furnished with the exception of Pictures. If the cheap prints were replaced and the bare wall spaces in these homes filled with appropriate selections from our Picture Department at the present low prices, the expense would be but a few dollars, and the effect would be a better showing for the money than would be obtained if three times the amount were expended in almost any other furnishings. Among the low priced goods you will find 16x20 Artotypes in polished oak frames at 97c. The pictures at $1.50, $2.25 and $5.50 are very attractive, while the large steel engravings with heavy oak frames and mats at $9.00 are the same that have been sold in many places at from $15.00 to $20.00.
