From Our Special Correspondent.

Danville.

When Father Rauber commenced his labors in St. Mary's parish over fourteen years ago, the church possessed a debt of $11,000. Owing to his untiring efforts and the generous aid of his parishioners, the church is today a building of $45,000. His firm and resolute will and his skill in dealing with church finances, he commenced the arduous task of restoring the church to a sound financial condition. The obstacles in his path were many. But conscious of duty, no obstacle was too great for this man, and in 1891 saw his labors consummated of lifting the debt. And not only this, during this time necessary improvements had taken place, a notable one being the decorating and beautifying of the interior of the church. A new altar for the sisters was also built. It is safe to say that these improvements and additions aggregate $5,000. To-day the condition of the church is better than ever. COOK OPERA HOUSE.

Miss Katie Emmett, a young actress who has been winning fame as an Irish star, will appear at the Cook Opera House the first half of next week, in the new and picturesque drama "Killarney." The play is from the pen of the veteran playwright, O. T. Murphy. "Killarney" is a charming story of life in the Green Isle during the latter part of the last century, and possesses unusual interest for the Irish auditor on account of allusions to contemporary events in the politics of the country. The theme of the play rests on the fortunes of a young girl living in the vicinity of the famous lakes of Killarney. The entire play is well constructed and written in splendid style, the lines being bright and sparkling with genuine Celtic wit. The part of Kitty Burke is well suited to Miss Emmett's abilities, and she has made the bit of her life in it. The company surrounding her is the best that has ever been seen in an Irish drama for many years and every character is in the hands of a capable artist. Two carloads of scenery are used in the piece and the costumes are of the most elegant and costly description.

ACADEMY.

Signal Light.

Gray & Stephen's latest railroad dramatic success, Signal Light, contains all the elements necessary to make it take a strong hold of the average theatre-goer. With a strong story tersely told, a good plot exciting situations, crisp comedy situations and a judicious intermingling of pathos, it cannot help but quickly win its way into the hearts of every one who sees it. The characters are true and home-like, those which can be seen on our streets every day, and the moral told is a plain but strong one. Such is the attractiveness of the play that people are not satisfied with one view of it, but pay several visits to it during its stay. It comes to the Academy for the week of Feb. 5th.

Clie, a dancer who is unrivalled and unapproached by any artiste of her kind, has been specially engaged for the Gray & Stephen's company.
