FANCIES FOR THE FAIR.

Greek ladies had steel and brass mirrors, parasols, fans and smelling bottles.

In 1516 Francis I gave his queen the equivalent of $16,000 in our money to buy her a hat.

Corsets have been found on the mummies of the Egyptian princesses of the royal family.

"I fear," sadly said the postage stamp when it found itself fastened to a love letter, "that I am not sticking to facts."

In 1864 the pointed hoods worn by the ladies often reached four feet above the head, making the lady's face appear about the center of her body.

High-heeled shoes first appeared in the reign of Louis XIV. The heels were often five inches in height, and walking was thus made difficult and painful.

Kid and silk gloves came into use in Europe about the end of the fifteenth century. At first only princesses and ladies of high rank were allowed to wear them.

Flowers in a state of excellent preservation have been found on Egyptian mummies 5,000 to 6,000 years old. Some are on exhibition in the Egyptian museum, Cairo, at the present time.

Handkerchiefs were brought into general use during the empire in France. The Empress Josephine had bad teeth, and when talking or laughing always held her handkerchief before her mouth.

At the end of the fourteenth century ladies' headdresses assumed the shape of two enormous horns projecting from the sides of the head often five or six feet. Doors had to be widened to admit the bearers.

A young girl, described as very beautiful, is said to be performing remarkable cures of serious maladies among the residents of Tures, Mexico, and vicinity, where they call her Saint Anita, merely by laying her hands on the sufferers.

COMPENSATIONS.

The archbishop of Canterbury is paid $80,000 a year.

Head masters of the highest class of schools in England receive from $25,000 to $35,000 a year.

Successful English barristers like Sir Charles Russell have yearly incomes variously estimated at from $75,000 to $100,000.

About 4,000 men have been affected by the reduction of wages for bottle blowers who heretofore made from $4.60 to $15 per day.

LADIES.

The increase in our last year's business will make it necessary to enlarge our manufacturing plant. Our high workmanship and low cost makes low prices. We give our customers the profit. We do not pay $100 for a large store and have large expenses to run, so if you think of having your real garment made over or repaired, you will do well to give us a call, as more than can be spent now and better satisfaction given, and it will be ready to wear the first day the cold weather commences. All furs left over will be insured without charge. We are now located on the first floor, No. 115 to 118 Beckley Building, 37 S. Clinton street. We have also received the latest styles from London and Paris with Empire sleeves.
