CHAIRMAN WILSON

Articles were provided for by passing separate bills in each instance placing them on the free list.

This action, however, amounts to nothing more than a protest of the house against the senate rates on these articles, as the special bills covering them will undoubtedly be buried in committee of the senate.

Mr. Reed sat down disconsolately and Mr. Wilson took the floor. He wore a frock coat and a blue necktie. He spoke calmly, but eloquently, the Democrats crowding about him and listening intently to his every word.

CUSTOMS OF COSTERS.

They Lead a Peculiar Life, but Are Philosophers All the Time.

A writer in the London Quiver says that the coster's work is extremely hard and his profits are precarious. He lives for a good purpose. When he speaks of himself as "a general dealer," he means that he trades in anything which enables him to turn an honest penny.

"On a hot night I started on a trip up the state. I had been careful to engage my berth in the morning and had selected it in the center of the car, so I felt assured that I would be reasonably comfortable. It so happened that travel was heavy that night, and my car was crowded. To my great disgust, too, it was a very old car. I am too old a traveler to fret, however, and I went into the smoker with a calm mind.

"I adjusted everything carefully, removed all my clothes, dozed some nice cool pajamas and lay back on my pillow sleepily. I had just begun to doze off when I was aroused by a queer, rumbling noise. It sounded as though something was the matter with the running gear. I listened for awhile and then closed my eyes again, thinking perhaps that the noise would stop. It didn't, though, and presently others appeared to be disturbed also.

"I am sorry to trouble you, boss," he said, "but one of the wheels on this car has gone wrong, and the conductor is afraid we will have a smashup if we don't take the car off. You'll have to get up and get out, for we are going to run this car into the shop and put on another."

"Naturally I felt a little annoyed. When a man is sleepy, he doesn't like to be told he has got to get up and dress and fuss and bother. It isn't the easiest thing in the world to sleep in a stuffy car on a hot night anyhow, and interruptions are not apt to compose the mind. However, there was no use of kicking, and so I got up and dressed as quickly as I could, gathered my traps together and prepared to move.

"There is one delight," said a man who was reared in a small town, "that I suppose many children born in great cities never know, and that is the delight of playing in the garret. Many city children, to be sure, have relatives in the country or in smaller cities or towns whom they have visited, who live in houses with garrets, and these know something of the delights of the garret, but there must be many city children who never even heard the name.

PLAYING IN THE GARRET.

Some of the Resources and Pleasures of the Playroom Under the Roof.

"For myself, I remember well a garret to which I used to climb in rainy weather up a steep and narrow flight of stairs. It was warm and rather stuffy in the garret, but the rain made music on the shingled roof, and the garret itself was full of treasures.

"The conductor was an amiable person and tried hard to hurry things as much as possible, which relieved the situation a great deal. In allotting space to us he came finally to an old gentleman who lived up in the country. 'I'm very sorry,' he said to him, 'but I'll have to put you, sir, in the state-room. There are no more berths left.'

A Campaign Belle.

A relic of the presidential campaign of 1884, consisting of a copper coin issued by the opponents of Andrew Jackson, is in the possession of Ira H. Benjamin of Rome, Mich. On one side, encircling the center, are the words: "Perish Credit, Perish Commerce, 1884." In the center is the figure of a hog running, with the words, "My Third Heat." Below it, "Down With the Bank." On the other side, encircling the center, are the words, "My Substitute For the U. S. Bank." In the center is a medallion of Jackson, and below it the words: "Experiment My Currency. My Glory."—Chicago Herald.

She Served as a Soldier.

The late Colonel Burnaby told of the discovery of a woman who served as a soldier in the ranks of the army of Don Carlos in 1874. She wore the uniform and lived and fought just as the other soldiers, but a priest in whose parish she had lived identified her. Don Carlos removed her to the nurses' quarters, but she begged to be sent back to the ranks. He laughed. "Not to the regiment of men, but when I form a battalion of women you shall be colonel."—London Truth.
