ROSCOMMON.

A sad boating fatality occurred at Loughglanny by which a young man named Shanahan unhappily lost his life. Shanahan, accompanied by two other young men, took a small boat belonging to Mr. Wyndham, of Castlerea, to have a sail on the lake convenient to the village. There was a plug in the boat which, in some unaccountable way, fell out, and the boat immediately filled with water, and all three were immersed in the lake.

After considerable difficulty two of the young men were rescued, but Shanahan sank. After a search the dead body was recovered. An inquest was held afterwards, when a verdict of accidental death was returned.

SLIGO.

After considerable discussion the Sligo Board of Guardians have decided to grant the results fees to the Workhouse schoolmaster and mistress.

Mr. James Fitzgerald, Borough Coroner, held an inquest in the Sligo District Lunatic Asylum touching the death of an inmate, Rose Oummins, who was found dead in bath-room. From the evidence it appeared that deceased, who was about 59 years of age, came from Tubercury Union Workhouse about fifteen months ago for treatment, and had remained in the asylum since, having been in the infirmary recently. On the evening of her death she was missed from the ward, and the woman in charge, Mary Anne Kilduff, immediately instituted a search, and found deceased about ten minutes later hanging from one of the rails in the bath-house. She was dead at the time. The jury found a verdict in accordance with the testimony, and expelled the officers from all claims in the matter.

Academy of Music.

Manager Cook announces that, commencing Monday night, September 10th, for the week, his patrons will have an opportunity of witnessing an American play by an American author and produced by American actors, "A Modern Heroine." The piece is a military comedy drama, not a war play, although dealing with military events, the time of action occurring in the time of peace, and shows the devotion of a woman to the man she loves, proving that the age of true heroism is not past, but that there is such a thing as "A Modern Heroine." It is by Henry Simon and will be presented by a most carefully selected company and with many new and original scenic effects, making it one of the greatest productions before the theatre going public. The company is under the personal management of David Trafel, and nothing will be left undone to make the success of the play complete. Don't forget the date, week commencing Monday, September 10th.

A bright and sparkling comedy, replete with novelties of all sorts, beautiful scenery, charming and popular music and a collection of the funniest people on the stage, gives the "Up-to-Date" farce-comedy, "A Railroad Ticket," which will be presented here shortly.

The one great novelty to be seen in the theatre next week will be the wonderful trained animal, stocks and wild geese, of the late of Hogenbeck's and Kester & Bial's New York City, which should be sufficient recommendation of marvelous performances. Then there will be those clever gymnasts, Vanverson and Garnet, the Worths, violin soloists and duettists, Helen Conklin, the California nightingale.

There will also be George W. Moore, the Monologist and singer. There will be other artists to complete the list, while in the duo the magnet will be Giza, the magnetic girl. Giza has performed her inscrutable, one unexplainable feat before the crowned heads of Europe. Weighing but ninety pounds, Giza is a degree of magnetic force, strength is conceived, Giza possesses of an undefined magnetic power that makes the strongest man infant in her grasp.

Billy Wells, the man with the iron skull, will break rocks on his head, and Millie Owen, the famous long-haired lady, will supplant the other ball.

The changes wrought by the unweary hand of Father Time, destroying, remodeling, enlarging are many and manifold. Rochester's robust youth sustains these changes and contrives to flourish under them. A representative of the CATHOLIC JOURNAL, lighting on one of them the other day in a progress at No. 20 North Clinton street.

The site is a historic one, being that of a palatial residence, which stands connected with the name of the late Major Filon. The grand mansion of the late major has lost its private character, and after considerable re-arrangement, especially in regard to its interior, is now a palatial sanitarium.

The transformation has been completed, and the building is occupied by the noted specialists in nervous and chronic diseases, Drs. Meagher and Wadsworth.

The interior of the building, new and airy, is a special feature, the architect's invention and the decorator's art were seen to advantage. A few steps leads to the doorway, on which appears the words "Magnetic and Surgical Institute." The door opens on a spacious hallway, from which one turns on the right to the reception room, which is of imposing dimensions and richly furnished. In the rear of the reception room are three large consulting rooms, laboratory and bathroom, the whole comprising a suite of rooms that commands the spectator's admiration as he trends on Brussels and Moquette carpets and leads his aesthetic taste on the furniture of antique oak, a gilded and lacquered walls. The effect, especially under the elaborate electric lighting, which has been introduced, is charming in the extreme.

The remainder of the building is devoted to rooms for the reception of patients residing at the institute and undergoing medical and surgical treatment. Such is a mere outline of the prominent features of the sanitarium for the practice of the new therapeutics, having its headquarters in Rochester.

What exactly is meant by the new therapeutics may be briefly explained by a remark of the reporter who celebrated his 85th birthday last week, we refer to the distinguished physician and shining light in the literary world—Oliver Wendell Holmes. Speaking of drugs this veteran physician said, "If medicine were thrown hots bolts into the sea it would undoubtedly be bad for the fish but the act would confer a boon on the human race." In the new therapeutics the physician, who is pre-eminently a student of nature's methods of cure, trusts not to drugs, but to magnetic healing, massage treatment, electricity in all its forms, and baths of all kinds. Such treatment in the hands of Drs. Meagher & Wadsworth has been abundantly proved to be marvelous.

Not to say miraculous in its effects, especially in cases of nervous and chronic diseases. Rochester may congratulate herself on the establishment of such an institution in her midst. No man can fail of finding the sanitarium, which is now open for the treatment of patients, one door from the Wonderland theatre, No. 20 North Clinton street. Drs. Meagher & Wadsworth can be consulted free of charge. Hours 9 to 9.
