OUR SIXTH YEAR.

The present number commences Volume VI of the JOURNAL. The first issue bore date of October 5, 1889. It was a small four page sheet, the pages being 12 1/2 inches in size. How the JOURNAL has grown since then is a familiar story to all our older readers. It has lived longer than any Catholic paper ever established in this diocese. It has become a permanent institution of the Flower City, being each week received into the homes of a good portion of the 20,000 Catholics living in the diocese and going, too, east, west, north and south, to numerous subscribers scattered all over this great country. It is but at the beginning of its career, and in the future we confidently hope it will make far greater strides toward perfection, usefulness and influence than it has in the half decade just closed. All wise Catholics, from the Holy Father in Rome down to the humblest layman, appreciate the usefulness of a Catholic paper. Indeed, our present illustrious pontiff has said that a Catholic paper is a perpetual mission in every parish. This being true each Catholic should take a personal interest in the welfare of the Catholic press, and particularly in his own diocese, may reasonably be expected to have the strongest claims upon his consideration.

There are three classes of patrons on whom a Catholic paper depends for support—those who subscribe for it, those who advertise in it, and those who favor its publishers by patronizing the job printing department, which is a necessary adjunct to almost every newspaper published outside of the very largest cities.

It is easy to secure a sufficient number of the first class to attain a large circulation, but, unfortunately, it is not so easy to secure so many who will pay their subscription promptly. In this lies one of the great drawbacks to the success of the Catholic press. As a contemporary well puts it, the delinquent subscriber is the greatest enemy to Catholic literature known. Thousands of papers must be sent out for which the expense incurred in making collections eats up all the profits of the publishers. If subscribers would pay promptly as they ought, Catholic papers would flourish and become powerful.

The second class of patrons are patrons for revenue only—that is, they advertise to increase their business, and receive two dollars in return for every one dollar which they expend. Printers Ink, the best authority on advertising in the country, declares that religious newspapers are among the best advertising mediums in existence.

The third class of patrons, if numerous, constitute a powerful help to the publisher of a Catholic newspaper. These few journals can exist only by the printing department carried on in connection with them. It is not probable that Vilatte was even consecrated by one of these. He has

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE

THE DEMOCRACY FRAINED.
EDITOR OF THE JOURNAL.—
I was much pleased that you published in your issue of last Saturday that part of the Democratic platform adopted at Saratoga last week, which refers to religious liberty, and also the manly and courageous words of Senator Hill, the Democratic nominee for governor, on the same subject. The Republican convention and the candidates nominated there, dared not say a single word regarding this most important issue. They knew very well that the members of that nefarious religious political organization, which would rob us of our rights as citizens, consists almost exclusively of members of the Republican party, and the fear that by saying anything in condemnation of them they would lose the votes of these enemies of justice and liberty closed their mouths.

The anti-A. P. A. plank of the Democratic platform as well as the words of Senator Hill, spoken in the same spirit, should be kept before the eyes of the Catholic voters constantly until the day of election. Every fair-minded voter, be he Catholic or Protestant, should show the Republican party on election day, that such cowardice as was displayed at Saratoga by the last convention will not go unpunished. No Catholic should neglect to cast his ballot for the party that is manly and noble enough to condemn those who would rob their fellow citizens of their rights on account of their religious belief.

The JOURNAL could take no other attitude, under the circumstances, and remain true to its duty as a Catholic paper. If any of our readers are inclined to question this assertion, let them read the oaths taken by members of the A. P. A. as given on our first page this week, and then bear in mind that the Republicans of the State, in convention assembled, knowing the true character of the A. P. A. and of these oaths, refused absolutely to condemn them. Why should not that party be punished for its sympathy with proscription?

AN ANXIOUS CORRESPONDENT.

EDITOR OF CATHOLIC JOURNAL.
Is the report true? Is it possible that the Roman Catholic church of America, will renounce allegiance to the Pope?

Such a report has been published in several papers. I clip the enclosed from a religious paper widely circulated in both America and Europe: What are the facts of the case?

Our correspondent's question is certainly a startling one. There is no foundation for his fears however, since no considerable body of American Catholics show even the faintest tendency to cut themselves off from the true Church by renouncing allegiance to its Supreme Head. The clipping enclosed by our correspondent refers to a resolution introduced at a convention of the so-called Polish National Church (held in Ohio recently) to the effect that "the delegates renounce their allegiance to the Pope at Rome forever." At this convention that monumental humbug, "Archbishop" Vilatte was the big toad of a very small puddle.

The "Polish National Church" was—
—for it has already proved a fizzle—the outcome of the excommunication by the Most Rev. Apostolic Delegate, Mgr. Satolli, of a Polish priest in Cleveland for scandalous and unpriestlike conduct. With a few other malcontents of like character he conceived the idea of uniting all the rebellious Poles of the country into an independent church. Meetings for that purpose were held in several Western cities, but the great majority of Poland's sons were too loyal to sympathize with renegades, and the movement met with no success.

That is the extent to which the Roman Catholic Church of America has renounced allegiance to the Pope.

Now as to Archbishop Vilatte. He was formerly a lay brother in the Convent of Mercy at St. Viator, Kankakee, Ill. He is next heard of as a Presbyterian, then as an Episcopalian. He visited Asia and when he returned, claimed to have been consecrated as the Archbishop of the Old Catholic; by the Patriarch of Antioch. There is no Catholic Patriarch of Antioch. There are two schismatical patriarchs there, but it is not probable that Vilatte was even consecrated by one of these. He has been connected with every movement that would add to his notoriety for some years back. His following is insignificant. Only a few years ago he communicated to Bishop Keeler a desire to be reconciled to the Catholic Church. He never proved himself sincere in the desire however, else he would now be doing penance for the scandal he has caused.

CLANNA GAEL REVIVED.

One of the unfortunate results of the long delay in giving Ireland Home Rule is, if reports be true, the revival of that un-Christian and detestable organization, the Clanna Gael. Since the brutal murder of Dr. Cronin and the consequent disclosures showing how the organization was made use of by sharp, unscrupulous schemers to fill their own pockets; since the murderous character of this secret society was made manifest, and since it was shown that men high up in its councils were the paid spies of the British government, all these things came to light, the Clanna Gael has been so awed by the strong popular disapproval which it justly became the object of that its defenders have kept mum and the organization has been forced into the background.

Now, however, it is said that the Clanna Gael has been "re-organized" and its leaders are again prepared for business. That means to issue bombastic manifestos, cause a murder or two, raise a large fund for the benefit of a few "professional Irishmen" and come between Catholic Irishmen and their spiritual guides.

The true character of the Clanna Gael may be judged from the fact that the oath which candidates take on being initiated is the same oath, pure and simple, that is taken by the candidate who is initiated into a Freemason lodge. Le Oron, the notorious spy, who was a member of the Clanna Gael and also a Freemason, says it often amused him to watch the expression on the face of a Freemason joining the Clanna Gael as he was asked to repeat the same oath which he had taken on entering the lodge. This is a splendid organization for any Catholic Irishman to join, it must be confessed.

THE GOSPELS.

GOSPEL: St. Matthew xlviii. 23-35.
—At that time, Jesus spoke to His disciples this parable: "The kingdom of heaven is likened to a King, who would take an account of his servants. And when he had begun to take the account, one was brought to him that owed him ten thousand talents. And as he had not wherewith to pay it, his lord commanded that he should be sold, and his wife and children, and all that he had, and payment to be made. But that servant falling down, besought him, saying: 'Have patience with me, and I will pay thee all.' And the lord of that servant, being moved with pity, let him go and forgave him the debt. But when that servant was gone out, he found one of his fellow servants that owed him a hundred pence; and laying hold of him, he throttled him, saying: 'Have patience with me, and I will pay thee all.' And he would not, but went and cast him into prison, till he should pay the debt. Now his fellow-servants, seeing what was done, were very much grieved, and they came and told their lord all that was done. Then his lord called him and said to him: 'Thou wicked servant! I forgave thee all the debt, because thou besoughtest me: shouldst not thou then have had compassion on thy fellow-servant, even as I had compassion on thee? And his lord being angry, delivered him to the torturers until he paid all the debt. So also shall My Heavenly Father do to you, if you forgive not every one his brother from your hearts.'"

The king is a figure of God, master and judge of the universe; and the debtor represents sinful man, who must render an account of all his actions to the Divine Justice.

TALE OF TWO BABIES.

True Story of Boston Life Related by a Radcliffe College Girl.

The car was crowded when I reached it, and there was only one vacant seat in the front, which I was glad to occupy. Just as I settled back, with a sigh of satisfaction, even before I had a chance to become curious about my neighbor, I heard from the rear of the car a baby's fretful cry and a weaned mother's wailing for the child, the tired child, mingled with these sounds came a second mother's tone, drawing but complacent.

"Need," she said, "hear that poor little thing cry? Ned is a good baby. He never cries!"

Of course my curiosity was aroused, and I turned to see the rival babies and their mothers. The fussy little one was in full sight. One rosy cheek rested on the shoulder of a neat but travel-stained little woman. The pretty, baby blue eyes were filled with tears, the chubby little fellow was sucking his thumb and doing his best to go to sleep, but the time and the place were against him. The patient, dark eyes of the mother, looked longingly on the sweet, troubled face of her boy as he rocked him softly in her arms.

All this, I saw in a moment, and I then tried to look beyond this interesting mother and her infant boy to that wonderful baby that never cried and to his proud parent. I could not see them, however, because the restless little head hid them from me, but every now and then there came to my ear the harsh of one voice, followed by the proud tone of the other.

At last the train stopped with one of those backing, bumping motions with which we are all familiar. Then the terrified scream of the thoroughly aroused baby made the nervous mother hasten to leave the car as quickly as possible. Following her and close behind her was a fat woman, with wrinkles in the back of her neck and a large, snowy hat. She lifted her baby up with one jeweled hand, and as she kissed him on the pug nose, drawled out: "Ned's a good boy. Ned's mamma's own sweet, precious doggie!"—Boston Globe.

BEWARE OF FRESH OLIVES.

How a California Planter Amuses Himself at the Expense of Innocent Travelers.

Eastern visitors in California are always much interested in the olive plantations which, in recent years, have become a feature of the most southerly counties of the state. The lovers of the succulent fruit when pickled and bottled for sale in the east and north are always anxious to taste the olive fresh and ripe. There is a popular impression that it is sweet and delicious; but, like many other popular impressions, this is a delusion and a snare.

A few miles south of San Diego, where the railroad makes a junction with a small one-track road leading into Mexico, a large planter has taken advantage of this delusion for his own amusement. On the arrival of each train from the north numerous travelers dismount to wait the starting of the train across the Mexican border. For their benefit the planter has nailed a box outside of his fence just across the way from the railroad station which he keeps filled with nice, ripe olives. A placard invites victims in these words:

FINE, FRESH, RIPE OLIVES,
FREE.
HELP YOURSELF.

Of course there is a rush from the station as soon as the box and its contents are discovered, and swarms of innocents seize the pretty fruit and dig their teeth into it. Then there is a combined howl and a great deal of expectation and disgust, for the delusive fruit are nearly as pockery as persimmons.

And the planter? Oh, he takes his fun from a partly hidden summer home within his grounds, where he occasionally seats himself to enjoy the spectacle. It is a sure cure for the blues, he says.—New York Herald.

Highest Fountain Jet.

The wonder of the New England states, an oddity of which mention is, for some unknown reason, seldom made in print, is the monster fountain jet at the Home of Desitrate Women and Children, near Bennington, Vt. The column of water in this jet rises to a height of 195 feet, being the highest known single fountain jet in the world.—St. Louis Republic.
