CONNAUGHT.

GALWAY.

At a meeting of the Galway Town Board, Mr. Thomas McDonogh, J.P., in the chair, the subject of the improvement of Galway Harbor was referred to, and a discussion arose on the action of the Board of Works in refusing to grant the sum of £50 (the Midland Railway Company having offered to contribute £50), to fee an eminent engineer to report on the works required to fit out Galway port for the accomodation of Atlantic mail steamers. When the directors of the Midland Railway Company found that the Board of Works refused to contribute half the fee, they decided to send, at their own expense, Mr. Samuel Ussher Roberts, C.E, to examine and report on the harbor. Mr. M. A. Lynch, J.P., proposed a resolution, seconded by Mr. Cunningham, T.C., thanking the railway company, and condemning the attitude of the Board of Works.

LEITRIM.

A significant gathering of Nationalists assembled at Crotty, five miles from Drumshambo. The meeting was held under the auspices of the Drumshambo branch of the National Federation, and was convened for the purpose of erecting a hut for the evicted tenant Farrell Flynn. Bands and contingents attended from Drumshambo, Ballinaglera, and Kiltubride, and several districts in Cavan and Roscommon were also well presented. In the course of a few hours a substantial dwelling was erected, thanks to the hundreds of Nationalists, who, inspired by charitable as well as patriotic feelings, went to work with a will. Prominent among those present were Messrs. Conway, Moran, Kearny, Early and others. Mr. J. O'Dowd, (organizor for Connaught), was, on the completion of the work, introduced to the people by Mr. McMorrow, and delivered an eloquent address.

KILDARE.

In the Nisi Prius Court, Dublin, before Justice Johnson, a gamekeeper on the Clongorey estate, named Thos. Boughton, aged 26, was put forward for trial on the charge that he, at Barrettstown, on the 18th December, 1893, did feloniously, wilfully, and of malice aforethought, kill and murder one Laurence Fox. The case came before the Dublin common jury sittings for the trial of record cases by order of the Queen's Bench Division on the prisoner's application, transferring the trial from the Kildare assizes into their own court. At the sitting of the Court, a jury was secured, but disagreed as to their verdict, and were discharged, and the prisoner was put back, not to be tried at that Commission.

They also took his watch and chain, tobacco pouch, pocket-handkerchief, and then made off, leaving him in the gripe, beaten so that he was powerless for some time to rise. The police subsequently arrested two men, named John Coyle and —— Rooney, farmer's laborers on whom some of the stolen property was found. They were held for examination.

Hughes, is an assistant to his father, Andrew Hughes, wool and butter merchant, of Mullingar. The defendant, denied the promise, and pleaded a rescision of the contract. WICKLOW.

The Leinster Winter Assizes was opened in the Courthouse, Wicklow, by Justice Madden, who congratulated the Grand Jury on the peaceable state of the province. The number of cases was only 37, as compared with 48 at the last assizes. The character of the offences was not of a grave or an exceptional nature. Seven cases were concerned with loss of human life, but in one of them only would a bill for the capital offence be submitted for their consideration. When they recollected that the Leinster Assizes embraced twelve distinct counties of Ireland, the number of cases to be tried, considered absolutely, was small. Most of the cases represented crime of the ordinary character, such as, so long as human nature remained as it is, they could not expect any populous country to be absolutely free from.

MUNSTER.

CORK.

TIPPERARY.

A laborer fell into the river at the Old Quay, Clonmel, a few evenings ago, and was swept down by the flood. He struggled and called for help, but owing to the darkness and the fog, he could not be seen for some time. Finally some one threw him a life-buoy, but he failed to catch it, and he was apparently fast drowning, when Mr. James Phelan, of the firm of Phelan Bros., Clonmel, jumped into the river, and succeeded in reaching the drowning man, and bringing him safely to the quay-wall, where he was pulled up.

Mr. James White, T.C., Clonmel, has been appointed by the Lord Chancellor Commissioner of Affidavits for the Supreme Court of Judicature in Ireland.

WATERFORD.

The chimney of the house occupied by ex-Head Constable Drought, in Waterford, was discovered on fire recently, and for a couple of hours the blaze was of a very stubborn and threatening character. A copious supply of water was utilized as well to extinguish the fire as to keep the roofs of the adjoining houses from getting fired. Shortly before eleven o'clock the fire was extinguished, [illegible] not without a good deal of trouble on the part of the Fire Brigade.

An inquiry is being held in Waterford, by Messrs. Allan Hornsby, Cecil Roche, and Rev. W. S. Greene, Inspectors of Fisheries, into charges made against the conservators and bailiffs in the Carrick-on-Suir and Mooncoin division of the Suir fishery district. The allegations amounted to charges of connivance at wholesale poaching by the conservators and bailiffs. A special meeting of the Board of Conservators was held in reference to the matter, and Mr. Cecil Roche said that, so far as the inquiry had gone up to the present, the evidence which had gone before them revealed a scandalous state of affairs. The conservators of the divisions in question absolutely denied the truth of the allegations made against them, and stated they would produce evidence for their defence when the inquiry is resumed.

The coroner's jury found that the deceased had committed suicide whilst of unsound mind.

The language complained of was used during the discussion about a pump at Corkeeran.

TYRONE.

Thomas Leonard and Mary Anne Leonard were brought up in custody, charged that they, at Cookstown, having the care and custody of Mary Jane Leonard, an infant under the age of two months, did wilfully neglect to provide it with food, and did expose it in such a manner as to cause injury to its health; and further, that they did feloniously kill the said Mary Jane Leonard. The magistrates refused informations in the case of the male defendant, who at once left the court, and they returned the woman for trial to the Winter Assizes.
