A COLORADO STORY.
 WHY THE RIVER AT TRINIDAD BEARS THREE NAMES.

A Queer Kink in Nomenclature Explained by a Rocky Mountain Editor—The Romance of the Lost Mexican Soldiers Who Were Bound For St. Augustine.

"Some queer kinks in nomenclature are discoverable in this country of ours," said Colonel William Stapleton of Trinidad, Colo. "Running right through the town of Trinidad, in which I live, is a little river, which familiarly and indiscriminately does its muddying business under three names. It is called variously the Las Animas, the Purgatorio and the Picket Wire. The names came about in this way:

"Santa Fe claims to be and is about the same age as St. Augustine, Fla. Both towns are considerably over 300 years old, although I forget the exact date of their settlement.

"Back in the middle of the sixteenth century the Spaniards at Santa Fe made up a military detachment to go overland to St. Augustine. The old-time didn't know anything of the country which lay between. All they were pestered on was the distance and the general direction, as they knew the latitude and longitude of both places. Rather late in the fall some 700 of them, steel clad soldiers, camp-followers, baggage train and woman, pushed in through the Raton pass over the trail now followed by the Santa Fe railroad, and at the beginning of winter made a camp at what is now the site of Trinidad, which sits fairly in the mouth of the Raton canyon, looking out on the plains.

"There they were in the very threshold of the Rockies. To the east of them, over which their course must trend, lay an utter waste of plains, apparently without limit. All that winter the Spaniards camped in the mouth of the Raton canyon. With wine, women and song they put in a hilarious time, and probably had as much fun as they ever had, before or since. Winters are not rigorous and spring comes early in the vicinity of Trinidad.

"With the first coming of the early grass the adventurers banished their armor, fitted up their homes and got ready to move. The camp followers, the women and the extra baggage they sent back to Santa Fe. When last seen the party bound for St. Augustine, numbering several hundreds, were marching down the valley of the little river by which they had camped.

"That was the last ever heard of them. Not a feather ever floated back to tell the story of their fate. With the last flap of the last banner and the latest sun glint on the remotest steel cap they disappeared from the earth. To this day no one is able to make a suggestion even as to what became of them, except that it is supposed they were butchered by the Indians.

"Fifty years ago there was an old Comanche chief named Iron Shirt, because of a rusty old shirt of chain mail which he wore, but neither he nor any of the other Comanches knew anything of the origin of the garment, or where it came from. It had been in the tribe further back than the last Comanche memory could trace. Many have speculated that it was a relic of Spanish explorers of three centuries ago, which had apparently floated off the earth that far away off in the mouth of the Raton canyon.

"But not for the link in nomenclature by the river. The disappearance of these Spanish soldiers seemed so serious and wondrous that it made a profound impression on the superstitious people they had left behind. They named the little river Rio de Las Animas, meaning the River of the Lost Souls, and it is supposed to hold the story of the expedition's dark fate and repeat it to itself in the river language, which the Mexicans do not pretend to understand.

"When the French fur traders under Sublette and St. Vrain came trapping in those waters from St. Louis, in a French effort at translation they made out that the River of the Lost Souls must mean the Purgatory river, and so gave the river its translated name of Purgatory.

"Later, when the American bull whacker marched through on his way to Santa Fe, he accepted the French name, but called it the Picket Wire. To this day the river wears all three titles, as the reader would soon learn by turning to the Trinidad newspapers, where he would find cattle brands advertised as having their ranges variously on the Las Animas, the Purgatorio and the Picket Wire.

"Every man picks out his name for himself, but they all mean the same river. It isn't much of a river, either, only about 20 feet wide at Trinidad. The Mexicans, however, loyally stick to the name of Rio de Las Animas, and Mexican mothers tell their children of the soldiers who, hundreds of years ago, marched from there and were never heard of again."—Washington Star.

Made a new use of him.
 Mr. John Doyle, of Canandaigua, says: "I went to Dr. Grady two or three years ago suffering with dyspepsia, flatulency, gas, headache, with daily spells of nervous prostration, and now say that I am entirely well. Dr. Grady is an infallible remedy to me."

Another Quick Cure.
 Doctors said she could not live.
 Miss Katie Matthews suffered with Bright's disease, had given up all hope as a number of doctors said she could not live. Dr. Grady cured her.

Remarkable Cures.
 Miss Lizzie Kenny, asthma, kidney disease and nervous prostration cured.
 Mr. Thomas Chalahan, grocer of Canandaigua: "Had a tumor, tried a great many doctors and spent hundreds of dollars in New York and Boston, was under Dr. Grady's treatment two months and can say I am cured and never felt better in my life."

Dr. Grady has permission to refer to any one of the above cases.
 An extensive experience in private practice, and in the wards of the largest hospitals in this country and in Europe, enables him to treat the above and all other diseases with remarkable success.
