Orono, Me., Oct. 4, '94.
My daughter, 19 years old, in the last 84 years had fits of some kind she would drop without warning and would work in them from 10 to 20 minutes, and then for 24 hours would feel very drowsy and heavy. She took about 1/2 bottle of Father Koenig's Nerve Tonic and has not had a fit since June, '93.

NOTICE.

Dr. Grady will take his usual summer vacation during the month of July. He will leave the city on July 1st and not return till August 1st. Patients will be sure and call on the doctor before the end of this month so that they may be supplied with medicines to last until his return. New patients who start treatment now will also be supplied with medicines to last until August 1st. Dr. Grady has devoted his entire time to the treatment of chronic diseases and to-day he stands as an expert specialist without an equal—not one single day's rest did the doctor have during the past year. As a result of his hard and skillful work, and the many marvelous cures he has performed, he has built up and has to-day the largest practice of any physician in the state. Dr. Grady comes from a family of natural born physicians and added to this his education and training in the largest hospitals in Europe and this country places him at the head in his profession.

Last Month Free Before Vacation. IMPORTANT.

The doctor will on his return, charge his usual office fee, but to all those who visit the doctor during June will receive a card which will give their disease and case number and will entitle them to free treatment on his return without any expense whatever.
Dr. Grady is known to be one of the best medical experts in the country, having met with remarkable success in the treatment and cure of diseases which have baffled and discouraged other physicians. He will deserve the patronage that he is enjoying.
Arriving in Rochester at a time when it would be supposed by everyone that there was but little work left undone by our home physicians and the several noted specialists, who for some time have been busily engaged among the citizens of this city and surrounding country, it was but natural to predict that no matter how great was the curative power of this celebrated physician he would find but few, if any, who needed his services.
To impress upon the public, almost in an instant, his superior skill over all who had preceded him, is but too plainly pictured in the crowds that from the very day of his arrival have constantly thronged his office. That his reputation has traveled far ahead of his arrival in person, there can be no doubt.
Dr. Grady is too well known over the entire country to need any further introduction to the public than to say that he is not only a graduate of the first medical college in the United States but in Europe where he has spent many years of constant study in the different branches in his profession. He has with untiring energy devoted himself to his profession, and stands before the world to-day a man who can with all honesty claim to be able to master every branch of his profession which he makes a specialty. To meet Dr. Grady is to find him a most pleasant and agreeable gentleman, who impresses all with whom he comes in contact with not only his wonderful skill in his profession, but also with that gentleness of character so necessary to his profession.

FED ON MAMMOTH.

Missionary Saved from Starving by Meat From a Prehistoric Age.
A private letter received at Winnipeg from a mission station at the mouth of the Mackenzie river, within the arctic circle, gives an account of the narrow escape of a missionary and party of Eskimos from death by starvation. The letter says that the missionary, with half a dozen Eskimo attendants, started on a winter voyage of Eskimos to hold services in Mackenzie bay being open, they went by boat. To keep clear of drift ice they followed the shore line as closely as possible.

On the third day out a heavy wind sprang up, and they were compelled to land. The next morning they found themselves prisoners, pack ice having been driven inshore by wind and currents. A hard frost occurred, and was followed by intermittent gales and snowstorms, continuing for a fortnight, during which time the party was unable to travel, and the provisions ran out. For three days they were without food, and they were face to face with starvation. Then the missionary urged the Eskimos to go out and see if they could not find a stray ptarmigan or a sea fowl.

About two miles from the camp one of the Eskimos discovered two long bones protruding from the frozen earth. He called a companion, and the latter recognized the bones at once as ivory tusks, and decided to secure them. The two men went to work with their axes and chipped away the ground, and, much to their amazement, soon began cutting out frozen flesh, perfectly preserved. They secured a quantity of this and hastened back to camp, where they told their story and displayed their find. The missionary, who was something of an archeologist, concluded that the animal from which the flesh came was a prehistoric mammoth, and he knew, too, from his reading, that the flesh was good to eat, and the whole party that afternoon rejoiced over their good luck.
