A NOISE PROCEEDING

The Orange order—the parent and sponsor of the A. P. A., must be a nice sort of an institution if the following dispatch to the New York "Journal" is true:

Waltham, Mass.—The most unique case ever tried in the District court came up yesterday morning before Judge Luce, when an alleged "expose" was made under oath of the rites and ordeals through which a candidate must pass to become a full-fledged Orangeman.

Frank A. Preble was one of the candidates for admission. He thought the initiatory ceremony was cruel, and he sought legal satisfaction for his experience.

It was on the evening of July 26, 1896, he sat on the witness stand, that he received his initiatory degree in the Orange lodge of Waltham. He swore that he was compelled to discard all religion except his underwear. He was then blindfolded and led into the larger lodge room by Brothers Tracy and William Mable, who acted as conductors.

There he was struck severely with whips and finally posed upon what seemed to him a steep ladder. An obligation was imposed, after which the ladder was suddenly pulled from under him and he was pitched into a canvas blanket in which he was bonned around for a while.

Finally Mable told him to raise his hand and try to "find the serpent." Brother Graham then cried, "You did not find it, but it has found you," and then, Preble said, a branding iron was applied twice to his breast. After that he was seated and the rest was easy.

The witness's breast, was badly burned, he said, and the wounds were raw for ten days. His legs were discolored by the blows he received from the whips.

Edward Aroh was another sufferer. He said on the stand that he had witnessed Preble's ordeal in getting his degree. "Brothers Tracy and Mable guarded the candidate," he said; "Brother O'Neill heated the branding iron and Brother Graham applied it. Brother Nickerson had objected that the iron was too hot but O'Neill heated it still further and said they would give the candidate a 'good roast'."

Aroh had not interfered to protect Preble, he said, because he said it would do no good. His own legs had been whipped harder than had Preble's, but his own breast had escaped more lightly. He only had one brand applied, and that was about the size of a half dollar.

No evidence was put in for the defense, but counsel argued that no proof had been given that any departure had been made from the regular form of initiation sufficient to constitute an assault. Preble, having applied for initiation and having been willing to abide by the consequences, no crime had been committed, and asked that the members of the lodge be discharged as "not guilty."

Judge Luce, however, fined six officers of the lodge $35 each. They were John G. Graham, G. O. Nickerson, Edward O'Neill, Daniel Tracey, Leander Weatherbee and Wilfred Mable. All appealed and were held in $300 bonds each.

It is to be hoped that the participants in the scandalous proceeding will be severely dealt with. However, the "candidate" is not entitled to much sympathy. It is to be presumed that he knew the character of the order he was joining, and, if that be so, he deserved all that he has received.

THREE STANDARDS

Politicians and partisan newspapers will never make many converts to the cause they assume to represent by a campaign of dishonesty and maddening. Yet that is precisely the sort of a campaign they are conducting. Democratic papers and partisans deride William McKinley because he does not stump the country and because he maintains a dignified silence amid the political turmoil and the storm of charges and insinuations a hostile press is throwing broadcast. The republican papers are making all manner of fun of Bryan and his speeches. He is called a "wind bag," and his speeches styled "empty nothings." His estimable wife is made fun of, her dress is criticized, her demeanor is sneered at and she is accused of being the real candidate. Republican papers abuse Bryan's followers and call them "archbishops," "repudiators," etc., etc. Such drivel is not argument, it is clap-trap, and the editor that employs such methods simply shows that he is not posted on the subject he rushes forward to publish. The Bryan supporters are not dishonest men; they are sincere in their attitude and earnest in their advocacy of their cause; they believe in it and they are followers of Bryan because he represents principles they have espoused. The followers of McKinley are not dishonest, either, as the democratic papers and abusers would make the people believe. They are intensely honest in their belief that the principles he represents should be adopted as the policy of whole nation. The democratic papers scoff and sneer at the "sound money democrats" who are about to organize the "National Democratic Party," but they have no cause to be honest men and so grounded in their convictions that they are willing to forsake the party with which they have been affiliated for years and suffer the opprobrium that attaches to those who "bolt" rather than sacrifice such connections.

We would advise our readers who are disposed to be fair and who wish to be posted on the issues of the campaign and who wish information to enable them to judge as to the mental "make up" of the principals in the present campaign to read First Major McKinley's speech accepting the republican nomination; William J. Bryan's speech in New York on accepting the democratic nomination and that of the Hon. William Bourke Cochrane, who is recognized as the "sound money" democratic champion. By reading all three you will get a fair idea of the mental power of each and the issues upon which the campaign is being waged.

American Catholics really have more interest in Lord Charles Russell, the English chief justice, who is now on a visit to this country, than most people comprehend. He is the first Irishman to hold such a high position, and the only Catholic chief justice in the list of jurists in Great Britain. He is one of the most eminent lawyers in England, and has occupied a leading position in the English bar for years.

An exchange gives this sketch of the chief justice: "He is a native of Ulster, where he was born in 1833. His mother was a Belfast woman of great strength of character, and all of her five children were educated in accordance with her religious faith. Lord Russell's three sisters entered the order of the Sisters of Mercy, and his brother is a Jesuit priest in Dublin.

"After obtaining his degree at Trinity Lord Russell began his professional career as a solicitor, but soon went to London. Prior to that he had married the daughter of Joseph Mulholland, well known in Ireland for his poetical works. Lady Russell inherits much of her father's literary ability. The young couple started in life without the advantage of wealth. Every step in his professional advancement young Russell won by hard work and by the display of exceptional talent. He was not a specialist in law, but was fortunate in the variety of his powers, and his wide grasp of generalities enabled him to become a specialist whenever he chose. It is said that as a cross-examiner he has no peer. The greatest achievement of his notable career was the vindication of the Irish leaders in the suit of Parnell and his associates against the London Times, arising from the Pigott forgeries. It was his brilliant record in this case that first gave Charles Russell an extensive reputation in the United States. Of late years no criminal or civil case in Great Britain has been really celebrated in which Russell has not appeared as counsel. The Lord Chief Justice is said to be immensely popular with all classes in England. His Irish love of fun tempers his austerity as a magistrate, while his fine oratorical ability has given him a distinction apart from his eminence on the bench. We have no doubt that Lord Chief Justice Russell will be the recipient of many flattering courtesies in the United States. He is an admirer of our people, and the admiration is cordially reciprocated."

A P A SHOWS ITS HEAD

That moral assassination party, the A P A, is not altogether crushed out, even if it is not making so much noise for the last six months. It showed its head at the republican state convention held in Saratoga this week.

Hon. George W. Aldridge of this city was the leading candidate for the gubernatorial nomination before the convention, but there was strong opposition to him on the part of other jealous leaders, who were fearful of Aldridge's growing influence. They used every means to defeat him, and in their anxiety turned to the A P A for assistance. That organization has followed Aldridge persistently ever since he made his debut into state politics, though why it should be hard to say. Two years ago it worked against his nomination for lieutenant governor and claimed the credit for encompassing his defeat.

This week it was nothing less to continue its dirty work. James Sargent, of this city, went to Saratoga to work against Aldridge. The organization distributed copies of a circular with this infamous inscription: "If you want a Roman Catholic confessor set up in the executive mansion at Albany vote for George W. Aldridge for governor." It is not probable that this covert opposition of bigots was the sole cause of Aldridge's defeat, but it contributed to the result.

We wonder if the citizens of the Empire State will resent the sort of campaigning. In conclusion it is not amiss to say that Mr. Aldridge will not lose in the esteem of his fellow men by such opposition. He is greater in defeat after the employment of such contemptible tactics on the part of his opponents.

Says the "Catholic Standard and Times": "Some of the Protestant denominations certainly develop queer ministerial freaks. Out in Oakland, Cal., a certain 'Rev. Dr.' O. W. Wendt in a sermon preached recently, advocated the painless killing of those incurably ill or mortally wounded. This is a repudiation of the constant teaching and practice of Christianity from its very foundation, and a recurrence to the brutal heathenism of the Spartans. It is not stated in the dispatch to what denomination the preacher belongs, but he is hardly a Christian in the true sense of the word."

The apple crop this year is said to be the largest since 1891—that is, in Western New York. It is probable that the apple orchards of Western New York are the most extensive in the country if not in the world. And the apples are so good that Queen Victoria eats them, likewise the English nobility.

Lord Charles Russell's address before the American Bar association stamped him as a jurist of large learning, rare grace of expression and eminent broad-mindedness.

Candidate Bryan spoke to 20,000 people in Brown's square Wednesday.

It cannot be that Spain is really in earnest in proposing to file claims against the United States for damages because filibustering expeditions have been allowed to leave American ports bound for Cuba. She would have hard work to establish such a claim in any disinterested tribunal in the world.

If the good standard is a good thing, why should we strive for bimetallism, national or international?

THE GOSPELS

GOSPEL: St. Matthew, vi. 24-33.
At that time Jesus said to His disciples: "No man can serve two masters. For either he will hate the one and love the other, or he will sustain the one and despise the other. You cannot serve God and Mammon. Therefore I say to you be not solicitous for your life, what you shall eat, nor for your body, what you shall put on. Is not the life more than the meat, and the body more than the raiment? Behold the birds of the air, for they neither sow, nor do they reap nor gather into barns; and your Heavenly Father feedeth them. Are not you of much more value than they? And which of you by taking thoughts can add to his stature one cubit? And for raiment why are you solicitous? Consider the lilies of the field, how they grow: they labor not, neither do they spin. But I say to you that not even Solomon in all his glory was arrayed as one of these. And if the grass of the field, which is today, and to-morrow is cast into the oven, God doth so clothe, how much more you, O ye of little faith? Be not solicitous therefore, saying: What shall we eat, or what shall we drink, or wherewith shall we be clothed? For after all these things do the heathen seek. For your Father knoweth that you have need of all these things. Seek ye therefore first the kingdom of God and His justice, and all these things shall be added unto you."

What was the object of these words of Christ?
The object was to reprove the extreme anxiety and attachment for the riches of this world, and to exhort us to place our trust in Divine Providence.
