A doctor was quickly called, but when he arrived he said she had been dead about an hour, and that apoplexy was the cause. The coroner was then called in, who issued a certificate accordingly. Cook Opera House.

Emily Bancker, the dainty comedienne, who comes to the Cook for three nights commencing Monday, with Monday and Wednesday matinees, is not only a very pretty woman and a clever actress, but something of an authority on the political affairs of the nation as well. While she has no sympathy with the young "New Woman" and her combing and sagging, Miss Bancker, as a close study of politics, and keeps her finger posted on the workings of the different political bodies that have of the New York papers who are detained daily on political arguments in an everything else. She refuses to believe that the country is destined to go to the "democratic low water" under this god of universal ruin. Two political opinions friends of the actress discussed the political question in her presence. Miss Bancker was highly appealed to. For get it, she says, get it, she says, she is not a party man, she has no party, she has the right of election. If the calamity people talking about comes you'll need them then, don't you know.

"Saved from the Sea" a good story is admirably told. The novel mechanism effects are as surprising examples of artistic modern stage craft and the scenic artist's skill, the notable effects being the shunting operation on the "Ocean Wall" at sea and the rescue in the bridge in act and the precipitation of the villain to the waters below, and the wonderful scene at the scaffold. A novelty new to the stage and a scene that found its prototype in real life. "Saved from the Sea" will be seen at the Cook Opera House during the latter half of next week, and its success in other cities will undoubtedly be duplicated here. The company is under the direction of Mr. William Calder, who has chosen an excellent cast for its presentation. It is headed by Miss Henrietta Lander and Mr. Andrew Robson.

Academy of Music.

The opportunity of seeing one of the funniest of all Irish farce-comedies will be given the first three nights of next week, commencing October 19th, at this theatre.

"Hogan's Alley" is the much-talked-of world famous comedy, which has been adapted for the amusement of the far-seeing public, and a picture taken from real life, the characters of Hogan and Brogan being portrayed by the great comedians, Gilmore and Leonard, rightfully known as "Ireland's Kings," supported by a company of reputable performers of rare ability. Speaking of wasted energy, one cannot cease to marvel at the large ingenuity expended in this creation. Gilmore and Leonard have a weird dialogue that offers a case in point. It goes like a bunch of Chinese fire crackers and there is not a breathing spell in it from the first word to the last.

Next Thursday, Friday and Saturday the attraction will be the scenic melodrama, "The Druggers." The play deals with the adventures of a daring young revenue officer with a lawless gang that infests the North Atlantic coast. The officer and the leader of the gang are rivals for the hand of the heroine, and this causes all the trouble until the officer comes off victorious. The piece has a well-sustained interest with a dash of lively comedy. From a scenic standpoint it is strong, and the mechanical and electrical effects are excellent.
