

Could Hardly Believe It. My wife was so afflicted by nervousness for two years that she had to lay in bed mostly, but after she had taken Father Koenig's Nerve Tonic only three days she was so strengthened that she was all day, had a good appetite and slept well, she switching to her hands and feet stopped, so she took care of her child. People could hardly believe that three bottles of Father Koenig's Nerve Tonic did it. V. T. SCHENK, 222 N. Lewis St. New Orleans. A WORD TO WOMEN

You who are so familiar with the agonies of life and the barbaric treatment of the speculum and caustic—Rings and Pessaries—also nauseous compounds that despoil the stomach and weaken the nervous system. You who suffer so long and patiently those aches and pains in the head, back, sides, limbs and stomach, constipation, dyspepsia, hemorrhoids, nervous prostration, sleepless and restless nights, neuralgia, tremors, tired and exhausted feelings, especially in the morning, periodic pains, beating down pains and unable to be on the feet long without suffering the results—bleeding and displacements, the pale and wrinkled face and salivary skin, cold feet, deranged kidneys and hacking cough, catarrh and many other symptoms dependent upon uterine and ovarian diseases. You are the one we especially invite to call, and the one who would be the most interested and thankful for any method that cures without the unpleasantness and expensive use of the speculum, the painful and dangerous use of the caustic applicator, and the other time honored methods of treatment which have proved so unavailing in the past. JOAN OF ARC.

Her Faith in Her Vision Overcame All Obstacles Before the King. Her conviction was so strong that it galled the eyes; why of the poor about her. To these humble beings, for whom everything is difficult and impossibility in life, imagination opens a rich field, where all dreams seem credible. They believed the dream of Joan and lent their aid to the accomplishment of her miracle. This help and complicity of the people she was to find everywhere on her road. The king and the nobles accepted her because she served their purpose; the people believed in her and lent her strength. Thus from the first step of her undertaking her situation was clearly outlined, as it was to be to the end—to martyrdom. The poor people gave from their poverty to buy her a horse and vestments of war, and a squire, Jean de Metz, was by the popular enthusiasm, offered to accompany her with a few men. They set out for Chinon, where the court was assembled.

The way was long and beset with danger, but Joan upheld the courage of her companions. "Fear nothing," she said. "The Lord God has chosen my route; my brothers in paradise guide me on the way." And in safety they arrived at Chinon. There new obstacles arose. It was difficult to obtain access to the king, jealously guarded from all outside influence by his favorite, La Tremoille. But, as in a fairy tale, doors were opened, walls fell before her magic, and one evening the young peasant entered the great hall where, among the courtiers, disguised in a modest costume, stood the king, whom she had never seen. Without hesitation she walked straight to the king and, falling on her knees, proffered her request with so much grace and ardor that Charles VII was moved.

But imposture, witchcraft even, was suspected, and before a decision was arrived at learned doctors and ecclesiastics were called on to examine her and scrutinize her conscience. To all the subtleties of her examiners she answered with so much simplicity, so much profanity of good sense, that they were confounded. "There is more in the book of God than in yours," she said, and added, "I know not a from b, but I am sent of the Lord God."

The National Hero of France," by Maurice Boulet de Monvel, in Century.

QUEER BULLETS.

Nuggets of Gold and Wooden Slugs Used by Hunters in Emergencies. When a hunter in the old days lost all his bullets or had no time to shoot with, he usually devised substitutes that on occasion served the purpose well. All sorts of things have been fired at game or Indians, as the case might be. Old Hank Ellison, living up in Jefferson county, N. Y., told us his dying day how he was cooped up by Indians on west one with a little lead, lots of powder, a belt full of gold nuggets, a fine rifle and a bullet mold. It was on the top of a knoll where his log cabin had been built, and he had a barrel of water and a lot of wood for emergencies. The Indians kept just out of range, dashing in once in awhile to draw his fire. He soon used his bullets up and then used the gold. He fired nearly half his fortune at the redskins before they left him.

Many a hunter has used a pebble in the hope of getting a close deadly shot. Jackknives and ramrods have served their time as missiles. Forest and Stream tells about a hunter who had only a single bullet, but lots of powder. The bullet shot the horn of a big buck off, and the buck charged the man, who took to a tree top. He spent half an hour whittling off two inch lengths of branches and putting them into his rifle. Then he rammed them down on the powder and fired at the maddened deer. His partner came along after awhile with a belt full of bullets and, making a run for the tree, gave a bullet to the shooter, who quickly killed the deer.—New York Sun.

Patent Office Profits. "So far there have been nearly 200 patents issued for horseshoes," observed a blacksmith. "Every one of them was supposed to have merit. A large number of them were supposed to be of value for the reason that they could be put on horses by hands or claps and thus save time and the expense of horseshoers. Six thousand dollars, therefore, has been paid into the patent office by inventors of horseshoes."

"Not one of these inventions was ever used, and today, as during the past, horses are shod. The only shoe that can be put on a horse must be nailed on by a blacksmith. There is no royal road to wealth, and there is no way to shoe a horse except to nail on the shoe. This $6,000 is but a small part of the money paid out in connection with patented horseshoes."—Washington Star.

Sardon's Hobby. Sardon's hobby is building himself houses. In this way he delights in spending his wealth. On Mount Boron, on the outskirts of Nice, stands a huge erection of stone, dwarfing the surrounding villas, which is merely the foundation of a palatial residence which the eminent dramatist commenced, and after an expenditure of some $300,000 was prevented from completing on the ground that the structure would interfere with the outlook of the fort perched on the hill behind.

Expert Opinion. The white gull, circling high in the air over the sand dunes along the lonely shore of the lake, looked with pitying contempt at the wreck of the flying machine far below.

"In my opinion," said the bird, "no inventor will ever hatch a real flying machine out of his head. The human skull is too thick."—Chicago Tribune.

In no European country have so many illustrious English dead been buried as in Italy.

SHORT NEWS STORIES.

They Have Much to Learn—A Queer Society How Carlisle Bought His Home Tried by Telephone. Two students from Massachusetts spent several weeks camping out on the shore of a lake in the wilderness section of northern Aroostook. A native of that section has a small farm near the lake and also acts as guide for fishing and hunting parties.

Let's one afternoon the students called upon the native and requested the loan of a certain article. While there they stated that they intended to go "mouse calling" that evening.

Just as the shades of evening were falling the native had occasion to visit the lake, and he was surprised to hear, coming over the water, the coaxing voice of one of the young men, calling out, "Mouse, mouse!"

"You don't call loud enough. Let me try it."

And again arose a voice, louder and still more coaxing in sound, calling out, "Mouse, mouse!" This call was repeated time after time, while the amused listener remained on the beach.

The native finally became tired listening to the almost pathetic voices of the young men as they attempted in vain to coax the lordly mouse from his retreat in the woods and returned home.

The next day he asked the young men what he had, and they replied, "We called until 11 o'clock, but no mouse appeared."—Caribon (Me.) Republican.

A Queer Society. New York has organized a Society for the Promotion of Domestic Happiness. Of course the president of the society is a woman, and authorities differ as to whether she has been divorced three times or four.

The organization announces that it hopes to attain its end by legislation which shall do away with present marriage laws and substitute therefor a four year marriage contract or lease.

This notion certainly is up to date, even if it be not ahead of the times. But the idea is not entirely original with New York. A hawny Swede visited Marriage Clerk Salomonson's office in Chicago the other day and inquired the price of a license. He was informed that the previous document would cost him $1. Drawing from his pocket a book, he slowly counted out in nickels, dimes and pennies $2 and pushed the pile of coins across the counter.

"You've made a mistake here," said Clerk Salomonson, "and given me too much money. The license costs only $1."

"Dot's all right," replied the Swede complacently. "Ay, tak ay, know Christina purt' well. Ay, tak ay, know charras two year anyhow."—Chicago Times-Herald.

How Carlisle Bought His Home. Colonel James M. Arnold, a brother of Colonel Brent Arnold, is one of the warmest friends the secretary has in Kentucky. Colonel Arnold, in talking of the secretary's purchase of a home in Washington, said:

"I happen to know where he secured the money with which to buy this home that they charge Mr. Carlisle with not being able to buy on his salary. Congressman Draper of Massachusetts admires Mr. Carlisle very much and had him write every important brief for him. It required just 5 1/2 hours to do the work. Draper is wealthy, and the brief pleased him highly. No bill of charges was filed by Mr. Carlisle, but the congressman sent his check for just $25,000. Mr. Carlisle was taken aback by the excessive fee, but took $23,000 of the amount and bought his home. This is how he got the money."—Cincinnati Commercial Tribune.

A Champion Fisherman. Alvin Hills of Curwensville is probably the greatest fisherman in Clearfield county. This year he presents a record that cannot be beaten along the Susquehanna anywhere.

During the trout season he secured 1,500 speckled beauties, 800 he caught in Bear run, Greenwood township, and 700 in Heine run. He has on exhibition 180 eelskins, the result of this year's catch, and has caught 185 bass, all of which were secured in a distance of one-fourth of a mile from Curwensville dam to a point below the Susquehanna House.

Forty-four bass were caught while standing on one stone, and 6 of these 44 were over 19 inches long. This is no fish story, but can be verified by Curwensville citizens, whom nobody dare challenge for truth and veracity.—Rafesman's Journal.

Tried and Fined by Telephone. Hugh Gallagher of Mount Clair is a very busy man. What with running his large flour and feed business and looking after his campaign for freeholder on the Republican ticket, he had not much time to spare.

Friday when the hour came for him to appear before Recorder Ames to answer to a charge of blockading the sidewalk, Mr. Gallagher called up the recorder on the telephone and said: "Hello, Mr. Recorder! I plead guilty to that charge."

"Fined $10," answered the recorder over the phone.

"All right, I'll send up the money right away. Goodby!"

The only thing Mr. Gallagher regrets is that there was no way of paying the money by telephone.—Chicago Tribune.

Her Punishment. "Oh, Harold! Last night I dreamed I died and went to purgatory, and how do you suppose I was punished?"

"My dear little wife has never done anything deserving of punishment," replied the gallant Harold. "But what did you dream?"

"I was made to do all the things I had ever told my acquaintances I would do if I were in their place. Oh, it was too horrible to think of!"—London Fun.
