CONDITION OF CROPS.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 11. The returns to the department of agriculture for the month of November make the average rates of yield of corn 37.8 bushels, which is above the yield indicated by the figures in October. Last year the preliminary estimate of yield was 36.9 bushels.

The average yield of buckwheat is 137 bushels per acre against 301 bushels for the year 1894. The average yield per acre of potatoes is 80.8 bushels, which though not phenomenal, is nevertheless above the average for the past 10 years.

The European agent notes the lack of trustworthy estimates of the Russian wheat shortage. The advance in price, which is expected to be fairly maintained, will result in increased acreage in Great Britain.

CURRENT MISCELLANY.

Dr. Wyman, at a recent meeting of the Birmingham (England) Society of Natural History, stated that he had examined chrysalides of the common mud wasp and found that they were not frozen during the very coldest weather. On the morning of Feb. 17, 1895, when the temperature of the atmosphere was 28 degrees below the freezing mark, he found that such chrysalides were unfrozen, and they were soft and pliable.

The question naturally presents itself: From whence and how do such almost inanimate specimens of life get the supply of heat which enables them to resist such a degree of cold without injury or without becoming rigid? The only non-conductors surrounding them are the coating of mud (about one-fourth of an inch in thickness) and a thin, tightly woven covering of silky texture. What it is that enables such apparently lifeless organisms to withstand cold weather without freezing is a mystery which the entomologists have not explained.

Walking Stick Flutes. Walking cane flutes are made by fitting into one end of a flute handle and into the other a length with a ferrule attached to form the lower end of the cane. There are also made violins in the form of walking canes.

An old lady in Brussels, who recently celebrated her one hundredth birthday, relates that when Napoleon passed through her native village of Fumay, in 1810, a peasant having fallen on his knees to ask a favor, the emperor said, "Get up and never kneel except to God."

During one of his trips to Russia, his native city, Mr. Hare, the English writer, saw Mme. Makrina, the sole survivor of the Polish nuns who were starved, flogged to death, buried alive at Minsk in the reign of the first Nicholas. When the Czar went to Rome he visited Pio Nono, who received him very coldly. "You are a great King," said the Pontiff. "You are one of the mightiest monarchs in the world, and I am a feeble old man, the servant of servants. But I cite you to meet me again, to appear before the throne of the Almighty Judge of the Universe, and to answer there for your treatment of the nuns of Minsk." Both are dead now, and the heroic auto-crat, low in the dust, has had to abase himself in shame-faced humiliation for his cruelty.
