ENGLISH ARGUMENT.

An Interesting Revelation is Given Concerning the Decision on Anglican Orders.

less, unable to take food, half blind, and practically deaf, but at the very last unconscious of the world lay unconscious in the lofty Palazzo of his apartment. At his bedside, in almost continual attendance, and in unfailing affection, was his confessor, the Redemptorist Father P. Chierici. Around his bed of illness, and which became in the more recent weeks his bed of death, there were other friends, spiritual and natural, his nephews and others. Death, therefore, came not only pencefully but with consolations unfelt, but none the less real in abundant and fervent prayers. His Requiem, too, was sung in the Church of Sant' Andrea Della Valle by a nephew, Mgr. Mola, Bishop of Faggia. It is the Theatine church in Rome, and doubtless this was the reason of its choice for the solemn funeralia of a Neapolitan Cardinal. whose name was Cajetan, and whose patron was the saint whose name. he bore. Cardinal Bianchi, Bishep of Palestrina, gave the absolution after the Mass in substitution for Cardinal Oreglia di Santo Stefano who was absent. The customery mouraful decerations were to be seen within and without the church, and, as usual at the "funerals" of Cardinals, the choir of the Sixtime Chapels rendered the music of the Mass. The funeral of a Cardinal is always exceedingly simple. In the afternoon, after the lying-in-state, the body is borne in a hearse to the parish church, accompanied by the friends of the deceased, the clergy, and a few other persons. At the parish church the absolutions are given, and the procession goes thence to the cemetery. A few days later a Solemn Requiem is held in some large church; the Cardinals assist. Ambassadors or Ministers assist, the members of the Roman Prelature and very many other personages. The funeral absolutions of Cardinal de Ruggiero were held at Sant' Eustachio, the Church of St. Eustace, in the parish of which his residence stood. He was buried in the vault at Campo Verano, be-

Basilica before his elevation to the Cardinalate. P. Chierici has many interesting recollections of the Cardinal's activity in connection with St. Poter's. He restored all the side chapels. The work took a long time to do before his administration began. One chapel took many months of restoration. The healthy result of his personal inspection was that the rest were all done in about as much time as the first alone had required. The terms for settlement of the Manitoba school trouble as telegraphed from Ottawa, indicate the yielding on the part of the bishops of their demand for separate schools, the religious education of the pupils being otherwise provided for. The agreement needs the ratification of the full Manitoba Cabinet before becoming an actual settlement of the dispute, but there seems to be no approheusion that it will not be ratified. Practically, the terms of settlement are these; Secular instruction in the public schools to be discontinued at 3:30 p.m., to be followed by half an hour of religious instruction by the teachers; pupils mot to be compelled to remain unless they desire to do so; where there are at teacher to be employed in that section; all teachers must hold provinteach; the schools to remain under Government control: French may be used in the teaching of English to French pupils who cannot speak

When the church was newly decorated and the new side altars—the gifts the Church of the Sucred Heart in of the Rosary Society and the Children of Mary—were placed in the sanctuary, I wished from my heart that a new thigh altar, in keeping with the publisher of the Catholic School Gasurroundings, might be had. I could not think of putting additional debt upon the congregation, nor did I feel ustified in making adirect appeal for , when I knew that many would be strained to pay the subscriptions promised towards the improvements made. Just then a gentleman of the congregation, moved by a filial and christian motive, came to me and said that he would like to give an alter in memory of his deceased parents as also the deceased relatives of his wife.
